iafor would like to thank its global institutional partners
ようこそ！
The image used for the cover of the ACE/ACSET/ACEurs2015 Conference Programme is from a woodblock print by Katsushika Hokusai (1760-1849). It is one of ten woodblock prints in the series “Remarkable Views of Bridges in Various Provinces” (shokoku meikyo kiran) and was originally published in around 1834.

This print is titled “Tenman Bridge in Settsu Province” (Sesshu Tenmanbashi). The image depicts a scene from the Tenjin Matsuri in Osaka, one of Japan’s three greatest festivals. It is a summer festival held at Osaka Tenmangu Shrine dedicated to Sugawara-no-Michizane (845-903), the patron god of learning and art. One of the highlights of the festival is the land procession which is a parade of some 3,000 people dressed in the imperial-court style of the 8th-12th centuries marching beside portable shrines.
Dear Colleagues,

I am extremely happy to welcome you all to The Seventh IAFOR Asian Conference on Education (ACE2015), held alongside the Third IAFOR Asian Conference on Society, Education and Technology (ACSET2015).

Although still in the wonderful Kansai region of Japan, the historical and cultural heart of the country, we have moved to the port city of Kobe, and to our new conference home, nestled between green Mount Rokkō, and the Seto Inland Sea.

This conference holds a special place in the IAFOR calendar, as it was the first conference organised by IAFOR, and is one of its best attended, with many returning on a yearly basis because of the supportive and nurturing research environment, because of the unique networking opportunities, and because of the strength of the organisation’s platform. Since 2009 the IAFOR Education program of events has increased to see events in Europe, the Middle East and North America, as well as Japan, as this year we come together to consider the theme: “Education, Power and Empowerment: Transcending Boundaries”.

This year also sees the introduction of the ACE Undergraduate Research Symposium, where we will be welcoming final year undergraduates who are interested in pursuing postgraduate research and academic careers in the future. We hope that you give them as much encouragement as possible, and attend their poster Saturday afternoon poster session.

I would like to thanks the conference chairs, Professors Sue Jackson and Michiko Nakano (ACE), Barbara Lockee and Rob Logie (ACSET), and José McClanahan (ACEurs); the keynote, featured, and spotlight speakers, and each and every delegate, representing more than 50 countries. I would also like to thank our university affiliates, who bring their institutions’ reputation and academic credibility to help make The International Academic Forum a reality.

We welcome your active engagement in this expanding global academic community of individuals and network of institutions, and I encourage your active engagement and participation as a route to intellectual and personal empowerment, as we transcend boundaries of nation, culture and discipline, in the search of new friendships, and new knowledge.

I look forward to meeting you all.

Warm regards,

Dr. Joseph Haldane, Ph.D. (London), F.R.S.A., F.R.A.S.
President, IAFOR

The plenary session will be held on Thursday morning, with the event beginning at 09:00 in the Art Center Kobe’s 2F Auditorium. Please arrive in good time if you wish to attend the session. There will be an interval after the first keynote address and complimentary refreshments and snacks will be served. The plenary session will be followed by the official conference photograph.

Parallel Sessions
Parallel Sessions will run from 12:45 on Thursday afternoon, and from 09:00 on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday mornings. They are generally organised into streams. Sessions include three or four presenters. Each presenter has 30 minutes including Q&A time. The session length reflects the number of presenters.

All rooms will be equipped with a MacBook computer pre-installed with PowerPoint and Keynote, as well as a screen and an LCD projector. If you wish, you may directly link your own PC laptop, although we advise you to use the computer provided by plugging in your USB flash drive.

We recommend that you bring two copies of your presentation in the case that one fails, and suggest sending yourself the presentation by email as a third and final precaution.

Session Chairs
Session Chairs are expected to introduce themselves and other speakers (briefly), hand out presentation certificates at the end of the session, ensure that the session begins and ends on time, and that the time is divided fairly between the presentations. Each presenter should have no more than 30 minutes in which to present his or her paper, and respond to any questions.

The session chair is asked to assume this timekeeping role, and to this end, a yellow and red timekeeping card is used as a visual cue for presenters, letting them know when they have five minutes remaining, and when they must stop.

Please follow the order in the programme, and if for any reason a presenter fails to show, please keep to the original timeslots as delegates use the programme to plan their attendance.

Presentation Certificates
Poster presenters can pick up a certificate of presentation from the Information Desk. All other presenters will receive a certificate of presentation from their session chair or a member of staff at the end of their session.

A Polite Request to All Participants
Participants are requested to arrive in a timely fashion for all addresses, whether to their own, or to those of other presenters. Presenters are reminded that the time slots should be divided fairly and equally between the number of presentations, and that they should not overrun.

We recommend that the 30-minute presentation timeslot be divided as follows: 20 minutes for the paper and ten minutes for Q&A.

Poster Sessions
Poster Sessions will run on Friday and Saturday and Sunday morning. Sessions are 90 minutes in length and are held in the Base Room (6F Room: 606).

Poster Requirements
The poster display boards are 1800 mm high x 900 mm wide. We are able to provide tape and pins. Please be aware that there are no on-site poster facilities for printing posters.

Eiko Kato-Otani is President and a Professor of Osaka Jogakuin University. She received her Ed.D. in Language and Literacy from Harvard University. Her research interests include children’s language development as influenced by interaction with adults in home and preschool settings. She examines cultural differences between Japan and the US in home and preschool settings. She instructed kindergarten teachers using picture books on how young children can develop their language skills in 2008 as part of the projects of Osaka City Children and Youth Bureau. She published three picture books in collaboration with the children in the project. She also contributed to changing her university’s learning environment by using the latest technology. Osaka Jogakuin started iPod One to One in 2004, being the first school to ever use iPods in education. She is an Apple Distinguished Educator 2011 and uses her IT skills in her teaching. She also tries to experience herself how a new language can be learned. She is taking Korean lessons and speaks conversational Korean.

Keynote Presentation: Language Learning: Then and Now

Technology has changed our lives in many ways. How we learn a language is one way. When I was studying English, I used the various materials available at that time such as TV, radio, cassette tapes and pen pals. However, learners today can take advantage of the latest technology such as the Internet, social media, smart phones, tablets and digital books. Osaka Jogakuin University (OJU) started “iPad One to One” in 2012. “iPad One to One” means that each student has her own iPad to assist her learning. The English faculty members of OJU have created 12 e-books, which help students learn better because the books are motivating and incorporate various digital resources available. In my talk, I will contrast materials used in language learning in the past with the variety of technological resources currently or soon to be available for language learning today.
Dr. Barbara Lockee is Professor of Instructional Design and Technology at Virginia Tech., USA, where she is also Associate Director of the School of Education and Associate Director of Educational Research and Outreach. She has published more than 80 papers in academic journals, conferences and books, and has presented her scholarly work at over 90 national and international conferences.

Dr. Lockee is Immediate Past President of the Association for Educational Communications and Technology, an international professional organisation for educational technology researchers and practitioners. She earned her Ph.D. in 1996 from Virginia Tech in Curriculum and Instruction (Instructional Technology), M.A. in 1991 from Appalachian State University in Curriculum and Instruction (Educational Media), and B.A. in 1986 from Appalachian State University in Communication Arts.

Featured Presentation: Empowering Learners as Designers – The Rise of the Maker Movement
As instructional pedagogy shifts away from teachers as the possessors of knowledge to learners as creators of knowledge, strategies have emerged for operationalizing this educational change. The “Maker Movement” reflects a current classroom trend that is based on Seymour Papert’s educational theory of constructionism and years of related research. This session will trace the evolution of the Maker Movement and explore the power of engaging learners as designers, creators of tangible evidence of their own meaning-making.

Featured Karate & Power Demonstration
The conference theme of Power and Empowerment is explored in this karate display from expert teachers and students from Osaka’s Nishioka Dojo, who practice the Chito-Ryu form of the Japanese martial art.

Chito-Ryu traces its ancestry back to old Chinese martial arts of the Tang dynasty (618-907AD). Later, these martial arts that were brought to Okinawa from Fukien Province, China were passed on through the diligence and thoroughness of many past masters. Chitose Tsuyoshi (O Sensei) mastered the spirit and techniques of To-de which possesses a rich history and long tradition.

Furthermore, O Sensei studied the various forms of Okinawa Te. One discipline, which originated in Shuri City, a town of nobles and Samurai, was called Shuri no Te (首里の手). In recent years Shuri no Te has become known as Shorin-Ryu (小林流). The second discipline, which originated in Naha City, a commercial town, was called Naha no Te (那覇の手). In recent years Naha no Te has become known as Shorei-Ryu (昭霊流). O Sensei assimilated the essence of these so that he could enhance To-de among the Japanese martial arts. In addition, the present day Chito-Ryu style of Karate Do also incorporates a sound medical, physiological and scientific base in order to foster health in all, especially youth and the elderly.
Dr. Yvonne Masters is currently a Senior Lecturer in Professional Classroom Practice in the School of Education, University of New England (UNE), Armidale, Australia, a position that she accepted after 5 years as Director of Professional Experience in the same School. Prior to taking up her position at UNE, Yvonne had 30 years’ experience in secondary schools including in the roles of Curriculum Coordinator, Deputy Principal and Principal, which developed her skills in leadership, project management, curriculum and assessment. Her teaching experience spans three Australian states. Yvonne’s research interests centre on teacher education, professional experience and virtual worlds, with a particular focus on distance education students. She has a keen interest in developing an understanding in pre-service teachers of the need for a caring and professional approach to teaching. Her goal is the development of teachers who respect their students and empower them in classrooms rather than dis-empowering them through punitive and unreasonable responses. Yvonne gained in 2010, in collaboration with other researchers, an Office of Learning and Teaching (OLT) grant entitled VirtualPREX: Innovative assessment using a 3D virtual world with pre-service teachers, and at the end of 2014 received an OLT Seed Grant to develop resources to equip pre-service teachers for the new wave of virtual schools. Yvonne has written and co-written seven book chapters, two journal articles and presented six refereed conference papers in the last three years. While Yvonne is an active researcher and a teacher educator, her deep passion is providing school students with an engaging classroom where each student is respected for their own individuality and provided with an environment that facilitates their learning.

Featured Presentation: Communication and the Empowering (or Disempowering) Teacher

Regardless of the age of their students, teachers can be agents of either empowerment or disempowerment. Ginott (1972) stated that “I’ve come to a frightening conclusion that I am the decisive element in the classroom” and, as such, it behoves all teachers to think deeply about their communication in a learning environment. The main form of communication is, of course, language and major social theorists, such as Bourdieu, Foucault and Habermas, have recognised the importance of language as social capital. It is acknowledged that language not only has power, but frequently ‘is’ power; and how we use language in education is a vital boundary between empowerment or disempowerment for our students.

In this presentation, the ways in which communication, albeit unwittingly at times, can be either empowering or disempowering for students will be explored. The presentation will have three main foci: the ways in which language can inadvertently disempower; the ways in which communication is crucial for inclusivity; and the ways in which students can be either empowered or disempowered through the use of different means of communication in online learning environments. The presentation will be interactive as well as informative, and attendees will be asked to undertake brief reflections drawing on both personal experience and knowledge of education practice to more deeply explore how communication can build up or break down boundaries.

Featured Presentation: How Teachers Consolidate the Phenomenon of Cultural Reproduction by Using Duality

Giddens argues that the combination of acknowledgeability and capability allows the actor to develop creative actions that free him/her from social constraints. Such duality suggests that if teachers are empowered and recognise the inequity of educational results, evident with the phenomenon of cultural reproduction, they may behave as transformative intellectuals who employ a cross-boundary strategy assisting working-class students to produce good academic performances. This enables education to practice the emancipatory function by opening the gateway of upwards mobility for this student group that suffers from a severe shortage of cultural capital and, as a result, is unable to develop a habitus good at academic curriculum. However, although some secondary teachers in Taiwan recognise the rules or properties of educational selection mainly determined by examination scores, they do not use this perception as a resource to develop creative pedagogy, but as a strategy to promote their status as excellent teachers who are good at employing a 3Rs pedagogy aiming to produce excellent students good at tests. As a result, the phenomenon of cultural reproduction remains.

Conference Chair Address — Shaping the Future: Why Incorporating Undergraduate Student into Research and Scholarship is So Important
In higher education today, many faculty hear administrators pushing for more undergraduate research on their campuses. It has even become part of the marketing materials by admission departments. And yet, outside of the traditional hard sciences like biology, chemistry, or physics, many professors do not fully understand how they can incorporate undergraduates in to their own projects and what it means to collaborate with them in their scholarship. As such, this presentation aims to explore how to better include these students into your research agenda, help dissipate some of the commonly held myths about undergraduate students in research, and discover the benefits of this work for both faculty and students alike. Higher education is evolving. Students and faculty are changing at a rapid pace as well. Therefore, as educators, it is paramount that we continue to move forward by adapting and creating new ways of shaping the future for our students and for the educational experience.

Undergraduate Research Symposium Workshop: Undergraduate Research and You — A Conversation about Engaging Students in Research Across All Disciplines (with Yvonne Masters)
This session is specifically geared towards professors or instructors who work with undergraduate students. Here, we will focus on creating a dialogue with everyone present in order to discover how we are able to involve more undergraduate students in collaborative research projects. Moreover, we will explore disciplines that have long been considered non-traditional areas of student-faculty research (i.e., Humanities, Social Sciences). We welcome professors and instructors who have already engaged students and those who are looking for ideas about how they may take part. We envision an interactive session with input from facilitators and participants alike.
Myles Chilton (B.A. University of Toronto; M.A. and Ph.D. University of Chicago) is a Professor in the Department of English Language and Literature at Nihon University. Originally from Toronto, Canada, Chilton has been in Japan for over twenty years, where in addition to continuing his work in exploring relationships between contemporary world literature and global cities, he has become increasingly interested in the pedagogy of literature in EFL classrooms. He has published articles in such journals as Comparative Critical Studies, The Journal of Narrative Theory, and Studies in the Literary Imagination. More recently, he published on global English and literary studies in Japan in World Literature and the Politics of the Minority (ed. J. Han; Rawat), on the absence of the city in Canadian literature in Literary Cartographies: Spatiality, Representation, and Narrative (ed. R. Tally; forthcoming from Palgrave Macmillan), and on the threat of instrumentalized English studies in Deterritorializing Practices in Literary Studies (eds. M. Guzman and A. Zamora). He has also presented papers on these and other topics at universities around the world. In addition, he is co-editor of the new journal Lit Matters: The Liberlit Journal of Teaching Literature, and is on the editorial board of the IAFOR Journal of Literature and Librarianship.

Featured Presentation: English Power

English studies are often assumed to be crucial to student empowerment; ability in the world's lingua franca supposedly opens doors and expands horizons. Underlying this assumption is anxiety over the implications of the global spread of English. It is often seen as agent of destruction of not only local languages, but also of Anglo-American domination of local cultures, ways of thinking, and representation – in other words, it is seen as a power that must be kept in check. In my presentation I will discuss English studies as a locus of disciplinary power, how this power was derived from and in some ways structured external structures of political and cultural power; how the discipline is interrogating its internal discourses of power, and its place in globalized circuits of educational power. In particular I will discuss ways in which English language study has responded by rethinking its pedagogical practices and the authority of the native speaker, and how literary study increasingly recognizes that English language textual production and reception have widened their geographical and linguistic bases. I will also discuss questions raised by these developments, including whether globalized English should be seen as decoupled from its Anglo-American historical and cultural origins, and why, paradoxically, a traditional Anglo-American literary canon remains prevalent, particularly in non-Anglophone countries. Many argue that literary studies in particular has more work to do to break out of its traditional Anglo-centric critical and pedagogic paradigms, while others counter that the discipline should concentrate on the language rather than its contexts of production and reception.

Encouraging Children to Care: Developing a School Curriculum That Fosters International Empathy and Action
Lucy Bailey, University of Nottingham Malaysia Campus, Malaysia

About the Presenter: Dr. Lucy Bailey is Assistant Professor in the School of Education at the University of Nottingham Malaysia Campus. After completing her BA at the University of Oxford and her M.A. at the London University Institute of Education, Dr. Bailey was awarded a Ph.D from the University of Bristol. She has lived and worked in many countries, including Denmark, New Zealand and the Czech Republic. Her current research interests include children who cross national borders for their education – both refugees, asylum seekers and students at international schools. She has also published on education policy, gender and education, and management systems in education.

Abstract: It has been posited that the internationalisation of education will promote the development of empathy and action at a global level. For example, the International Baccalaureate Organisation claims that its programmes enable students to “be able to engage with people in an increasingly globalized, rapidly changing world” (IBO, 2014). However, the development of empathy and caring behaviour towards others is a complex process, which necessitates transcending the boundary between the self and other. Moreover, the degree to which caring actions are directed towards the geographically immediate community, or directed towards people at a distance, may be mediated by the regional and national boundaries which are erected during the schooling. In consequence, the degree to which the IBO system succeeds in creating engaged global citizens deserves further examination, both to evaluate the success of this curriculum and to identify key features which facilitate or inhibit such forms of engagement.

This paper reports on a study of the pro-social behaviour of students in international schools following the curriculum of the International Baccalaureate Organisation. Drawing on data from nine case-study schools, each covering the 3-18 age range, and located across three continents, the study included over 150 interviews with school personnel and students, and a survey of over 2,000 students. Building on the work of Noddings (2002) on fostering an ethical curriculum, aspects of the curriculum that facilitate the development of global caring behaviour amongst young people are identified, and ways in which these might be replicated in national curricula are discussed.

Untried and Untrue: Common Core’s Mechanization of Education
Craig Sower, Shujitsu University, Japan

About the Presenter: Craig Sower is Professor of English at Shujitsu University in Okayama, Japan, where he has taught writing and teacher-education at both the undergraduate and post-graduate levels since 1998. He is a graduate of the School for International Training. Mr. Sower has lived in Japan since 1988, and has written and presented extensively on curriculum development, teacher-education, writing, intercultural communication, TESOL, TEFL, American progressive education, Japanese education, yutori kyoiku, and education reform.

Abstract: In 2013, according to National Public Radio, two-thirds of Americans had not heard of the Common Core State Standards Initiative (CCSSI). A year later, 80% knew about CCSSI, and 60% were opposed. The confluence of Big Business and Big Government support for CCSSI has fed growing opposition including parents, teachers, and civil libertarians. While much of the debate concerns the contents of the standards, this paper focuses on the process used to develop CCSSI and the bureaucracy that would operate it.

The CCSSI claims to be state-led, internationally benchmarked, and based on the latest research, but it is not. In July 2009, $4.35 billion in federal funding was made available to recession-shocked states through the Race to the Top program. Participating states were required to adopt CCSSI and join one of two approved assessment consortia. In 2010, before the standards had been written, 46 states and Washington, D.C. agreed to join. As of May 2015, only 28 states and Washington, D.C. remain committed. Supporters say CCSSI is state-led and voluntary; critics say federal funding is intimidation and bribery.

In addition, opponents are concerned about centralization and the collection of real-time data on students and teachers. Mandatory, copyrighted curriculum, textbooks, lesson plans, and Core-aligned assessments remove teachers from heretofore-key elements of education. To many, the use of cameras and biofeedback devices on students to obtain fine-grained data seems Orwellian. Opponents fear such monitoring of classrooms will transform education from an art into an exercise in industrial-style Taylorism. We can do better.

The vision of IAFOR grew out of the perceived need to fill a vacuum in the communication and exchange activities of the academic world. Its mission arose out of examining that space and investigating why it existed. The vacuum existed because of the lack of opportunity for serious and thoughtful exchange between academics, members of the global business community, and practitioners in the fields of human endeavor that linked these groups together. In the field of education, for example, we have academic theorists, educational managers (political decision-makers and organisational directors) and classroom teachers with their support staff in IT, library work, exchange programs, and specialist fields. But how often do they have the opportunity to interact?

Moving beyond one particular field, larger questions arise. What function should universities prioritise in the 21st century? What do businesses see as their contribution to social and global well-being? How can people on the ground, trying to implement improvements that will transform human life, best be supported? And perhaps above all, what are the agendas that will drive mechanisms to enable these groups to interact effectively.

One piece of distilled thought that came from early exchanges at one of our conferences was the recognition that some of the rhetoric of concern about the problems of developing nations was perhaps over-focused on the term “poverty” because it can be defined only in a relative way. “Hunger” was put forward as being more immediate and itself a contributory factor to poverty, rather than the other way round. One key to the hunger issue could be the provision of safe drinking water, or water for irrigation in some contexts, while flood management might be necessary elsewhere. These, in and by themselves become valuable only insofar as they help to relieve hunger in specific contexts.

IAFOR is affording opportunities that do not exist elsewhere. The base is Kansai, Japan’s great commercial and manufacturing hub, one symbol of the emerging Pacific economy that is already eclipsing the long dominant Atlantic zone. Our conferences present those taking part with three unique dimensions of experience. First of all, it encourages interdisciplinary activity to be expanded. Depending on the field, this can face varying degrees of difficulty, ranging from discouragement to downright prohibition. Those overly dependent on fixed academic structures often see lateral thinking as a threat. None of these negatives apply in IAFOR. Its purpose is to generate new approaches that cross any disciplinary lines. The principle employed is to let the imagination permit intuitive responses to questions. There are no panels of critics. There are simply people who want to listen and reflect. The model of academic work as potholing is replaced by the metaphor of mountaineering. While respecting the need for solid and well-founded academic work, we feel the need to go beyond it from time to time to discover fresh approaches to old questions.

Secondly, it facilitates the heightening of intercultural awareness. Again, we encourage innovation through cross-cultural perception. Cultural roots influence people in their attitudes more than most would realise or admit. The need to see and internalise insights gained from other viewpoints is met by a process of steady illumination.

Thirdly, it promotes the broadening of international exchange. We may live in a world, but in reality parochialism still holds sway. The collapse of the U.S.S.R and the break-up of Yugoslavia led to the re-establishment of numerous former countries. While this may be desirable for the peoples concerned, it merely adds to the world’s cultural confusion. Exchange leads to explanation and that helps the growth of intercultural awareness.

IAFOR makes all of these developments possible in one gathering. Our conferences are not a substitute for specialist conferences. We intend our events to be an alternative that functions as a balance or even a corrective to the extreme tendencies that can arise from more narrowly defined research parameters. In short, IAFOR is promoting and facilitating a new multifaceted approach to one of the core issues of our time, namely globalisation and its many forms of growth and expansion. Awareness of how it cuts across the worlds of business, and academia, along with its impact on societies and institutions is one of the driving forces that has given the organisation its momentum, and is making it a pioneer in this global age.

IAFOR Journals

The International Academic Forum’s Journals conform to the highest academic standards of international peer review, and are published in accordance with the IAFOR publishing commitment to make all of our published materials available online.

Journals FAQ

How are journal editors appointed?
Journal Editors are appointed by The International Academic Forum’s leadership, under the guidance of the Chairman of the International Advisory Board. The term of appointment is for one issue, to be renewed by mutual consent.

How do we ensure academic integrity?
Once appointed, the editor is free to appoint his or her own editorial team and advisory members. All papers published in the journal have been subjected to the rigorous and accepted processes of academic peer review. Neither editors nor members of the editorial team are remunerated for their work. Authors will never be asked to “contribute” towards publication costs.

How are papers selected?
Journal Editors may accept papers through an open call, and proposed articles may be sent directly to the respective editors. A small number of papers from the associated IAFOR conference proceedings may also be selected by the journal editor(s) for reworking and revising subject to normal processes of review. It is expected that between five and ten percent of papers included in any given conference proceedings will be developed for inclusion in the associated conference journal.

How are IAFOR Journals related to IAFOR conferences?
IAFOR’s journals reflect the interdisciplinary and international nature of our conferences and are organised thematically. Papers included in the associated conference proceedings may be considered for reworking by the editor(s), and would then be subjected to the same processes of peer review as papers submitted by other means.

Visit the IAFOR website for further information – www.iafor.org/journals
IAFOR Keynotes Series

The IAFOR Keynotes Series is a collection of keynote addresses, or associated papers given at our conferences. Presented as a part of the open research archive, the Keynotes Series provides an example of the range and quality of speakers at IAFOR events. These keynotes are lightly reworked, and contain references, but are otherwise true to the original address. Many can also be seen in video format on our YouTube page. Whether you were present at the conference or not, the content from senior academics is a valuable source of information for research across a broad range of disciplines.

Special Series & Monographs

The International Academic Forum is publishing a number of special monographs both in print and online. One such publication is a selection of haiku from the Annual Vladimir Devidé Haiku Award.

Eye Magazine

Through Eye Magazine, the International Academic Forum’s own in-house e-magazine publication, we hope to enlighten you to the various views and opinions of our contributors, many of whom have presented full research papers at our conferences.

The Autumn/Winter 2015 edition of Eye Magazine is available on the IAFOR website (iafor.org/eye) and through the ISSUU reader on your browser or mobile device.
