ようこそ！
The image used for the cover of the ACP/ACERP 2015 Conference Programme is from a woodblock print by Katsushika Hokusai (1760-1849). It is one of eight oban-sized woodblock prints in the series “A Journey to the Waterfalls in All the Provinces” (Shokoku Taki Meguri) and was originally published by the Edo publisher, Eijudo, in around 1832.

This print is titled “Amida Waterfall on the Kisokaido Road” (Kisoji no oku Amidagataki) and features two men enjoy a picnic on a cliff jutting out over the Amida falls in Gujo City, Gifu Prefecture, so named for the shape of the hallow from which the falls emerges is thought to resemble the round eye of Amida Buddha.
Dear Colleagues,

We are gathered here in the fantastic Kansai region of Japan, home to the great modern metropolis of Osaka and the nearby artistic and cultural centers of Kyoto and Nara, on the occasion of the Fifth Asian Conferences on Psychology and the Behavioral Sciences, and the jointly run Ethics, Religion and Philosophy.

I would like to welcome you all to this joint conference, that will see some 400 fellow scholars and practitioners from more than 45 countries, from the academic disciplines relating to how and why we think, reason, believe, and behave individually and collectively. The conference theme for the joint event is “Power”.

Power in its various forms, hard and soft, political, social, military, economic, and cultural, legitimate and illegitimate, can be defined as the ability to influence or even to control people’s thoughts, attitudes and behavior. As such it is at the core of human relations at all levels, from intra-personal to societal and the global. Appropriate or legitimate use of power can lead to remarkable achievement and success. Abuse of power however is the cause of a wide range of societal problems ranging from domestic violence to war. Social psychologists also refer to the power of the situation as a critical but often underestimated factor in human behavior: Systemic or structural relations have inherent power relations, and these are often more influential factors than personal power relations in human behavior.

By focusing on power we can raise awareness of its pervasiveness and transform our thinking about human relations and social and global problems. It also raises awareness of related issues of vulnerability and human strengths such as resistance and resilience. Awareness and exploration of these issues can result ultimately in the empowerment of individuals, allowing them to resist or change the existing power relations in their lives.

Power, used or abused, conceptually brings together several central philosophical questions of ethics and religion. What is power? What conditions make its exercise legitimate? How is illegitimate use to be defined? Is power itself, as some have claimed, neutral? Can its exercise ever be neutral? Can there be an unconscious use or abuse of power? If so, how does it function?

The concept of power is one subject to perpetual reflection and interpretation, and we are confident that this open theme will excite a number of new research avenues, as we look forward to this being an intellectually stimulating, enlightening and “powerful” event.

I would like to thank the conference chairs, the keynote and featured speakers, and each and every one of you for coming to what promises to be a wonderful celebration of international, intercultural and interdisciplinary research.

I encourage your active involvement throughout the conference, and look forward to meeting you all.

With my warmest regards,

Dr. Joseph Haldane, Ph.D. (London), F.R.S.A., F.R.A.S.
President, IAFOR

Session Chairs are expected to introduce themselves and other speakers (briefly), hand out presentation certificates at the end of the session, ensure that the session begins and ends on time, and that the time is divided fairly between the presentations. Each presenter should have no more than 30 minutes in which to present his or her paper, and respond to any questions.

The session chair is asked to assume this timekeeping role, and to this end, a yellow and red timekeeping card is used as a visual cue for presenters, letting them know when they have 5 minutes remaining and when they must stop.

Please follow the order in the programme, and if for any reason a presenter fails to show, please keep to the original timeslots as delegates use the programme to plan their attendance.

Keynote Presentation: Trauma and Attachment Focused Psychotherapy with Maltreated Children

Learning objectives:
1. Learning the techniques of trauma exposure for children.
2. Understanding the way to facilitate children’s attachment to toward their caregivers.

Abused and/or neglected children often show trauma and attachment related psychological and behavioral problems. They need help to recover from traumatic experiences and rebuild healthy attachment to their non-abusive caregivers. The Center for Child Abuse Prevention in Tokyo has provided trauma and attachment-focused psychotherapy for more than 80 maltreated children who are placed at residential facilities, foster homes, and adoptive families since 2005.

This therapy has some characteristics such as implementation of trauma exposure to children in co-joint sessions with their caregivers who provide “holding environments” and encourage children to confront their traumatic experiences. The hypothesis underlying this way of therapy is that the existence of caregivers would facilitate trauma exposure to children, which, in turn, would improve their attachment to caregivers who help them to expose their traumatic events such as abuse.

Many children showed post traumatic play, life story work, and care-related play in the course of the playtherapy. In this presentation, I will discuss the meanings of this play and effectiveness of trauma and attachment focused therapy with maltreated children. Also, I will refer to the therapeutic meanings of “regression” which has been observed in many children in the course of the treatment. Regression might have very important functions for the recovery form trauma and rebuilding appropriate attachment although it has been almost ignored in the Western literatures.

Featured Presentation: Powers of the Soul - A Very Different Theory of Justice

Contemporary philosophical (as well as political, sociological and psychological) accounts of power focus on the exercise of power within given social conditions. From such perspectives power and its exercise, is largely a matter of external concern — the power of the media, the power of governments, of law, of politics and so on. However, certain writers in the ancient world of the West conceived of power and powers quite differently. They conceived of power as essentially located in virtues of the soul — internal power. While the Greeks were no strangers to the notion of external power (think of Thucydides’ Melian Dialogues) they conceived of such external power as having its sources in the soul of individuals and collectives. In this paper I address some dimensions of the internal nature of power and provide some suggestions as to what a theory of justice might look like starting from this vantage point — a very different theory of justice than those prevalent in the contemporary world.

Keynote Presentation: Context-Specific Motivational Beliefs - The Critical Determinants of Adolescent Learning and Self-Regulation

In this presentation, I will argue for the importance of context-specific motivational beliefs in the self-regulation and academic performance of adolescent learners. Whereas the importance of context-specific motivation in academic learning and performance is well established in the literature, the ways with which these diverse motivational beliefs complement or interact with each other to facilitate or hinder self-regulation and achievement remain less clear. I will briefly describe how “context” is typically defined in educational and psychological research and then introduce representative constructs such as interest, self-efficacy, and achievement goals, whose context-specificity has been clearly demonstrated. Results from several empirical studies will then follow, which show that these constructs do interact with each other within specific contexts to produce different learning outcomes as well as mediate the effects of stable personality dispositions and contextual variations on students’ learning processes and outcomes.

Featured Presentation: Constitutional Revision in Japan: The Risks for Freedom of Religion and Freedom of Speech

Prime Minister Shinzo Abe and some of his political allies have worked hard to begin a process of Constitutional Revision that endangers not only Japan’s post war pacifist legacy, but also the fundamental freedoms of the Japanese people. Much of the attention has focused on Abe’s attempts to amend Article 9, often referred to as the “Pacifist” provision of the Constitution. Many Japanese people and politicians have strongly opposed any change to Article 9, and it is safe to say that Abe vastly underestimated the resolve of the Japanese people on this issue. Yet, like a shell game, while people try to follow the fate of Article 9, other risks are missed. Once the Constitution is open to revision, freedom of speech, which has already reached a postwar low in recent years, and freedom of religion, may be at risk. I have argued elsewhere that Prime Minister’s visits to the Yasukuni Shrine violate Articles 20 and 89 of the Japanese Constitution, but with Constitutional revision such visits might become ordinary and in fact, it would be possible for the government to fund these shrines to appease nationalists. In the last few years Japan has fallen to 59th in the world for freedom of the speech and the press according to Reporters Without Borders. It is far below every other major democratic country with similar economic status (and many non-democratic nations). With constitutional revision free speech and a free press may be further limited. Shadows of the Meiji Constitution, where personal freedoms were empty promises subsumed to state interests and nationalist fanaticism are rearing their heads. It is not just the risk to the Pacifist provision, which has already been all but ignored by the current administration, but to the Freedom of Speech and Religion that bring those shadows forward. It is up to the Japanese people to protect the freedoms they have come to value and which they have used in ways that benefit the entire world with Japanese creativity and insight.

Featured Presentation: The Effects of Family Support on Depression Among Disabled Asian Elders in the United States - 2010-2014

This analysis seeks to expand our understanding of ethnic variation in life satisfaction among elderly household members who face a disabling condition that negatively impacts their health, particularly in regards to the US Asian context. With the introduction of oversampling among Asian households in the National Health Interview Survey we have a unique opportunity to look at ethnic differences in depression responses to health as well as examine the impact that household structure may moderate this outcome among disabled elders. This presentation will look at the risk of severe depression adults among Asian and non-Asian households dependent upon the respondents level of overall health and their access to family support as measured by household structure. We argue that the presence of immediate family support with the household should have a moderating impact on the risk of depression but that the presumed level of social acceptance of coresidence measured by ethnic variation should also result in measurable differences based upon household composition. As “filial responsibility” is often one of the characteristics ascribed to Asian cultures in the US as a component of the model minority stereotype this study seeks to add to a growing literature that looks at this stereotype using research that reflects actual variation within Asian families in relation to other racial groups within the US. Controlling for key variables including the health of the family members, age and race we measure ethnic variations in depression health among the elder household residents across various households compositions.

Featured Presentation: The Lucifer Effect in Indonesian Educational Settings (Impact of Situational Attribution, Obedience and Modelling)

Educators are supposed to transform knowledge and become models to their students. The word educator comes from educo (Latin) and they lead students to conduct behavior in accordance to their suggestions. In a number of ways teachers, educators, and leaders become the authorities to their students. In both formative childhood learning and transformative adult learning (Mezirow, 2003), people seek agreement and justifications based on interpersonal relations, doctrines and ideologies. Milgram’s experiments (1963, 1974) explained in detail how people tend to obey authorities. Bandura (1977) in social learning theory has also explained how people imitate the behavior of their models. When leaders transform inappropriate knowledge and perform inappropriate behaviors, students will tend to imitate them in a form of obedience for being justified in accordance to the authorities. Zimbardo (1971), through his concept of the Lucifer Effect, explained how good people turn to becoming evil because of the environmental forces, the situational attribution, where people internalized their roles given by the authorities. Numbers of Indonesian educational concerns reported issues of charlatanism and hucksterisms (Pope & Vasquez, 1991) are being implemented along with the enforcement by the authorities. Various misconduct issues in Indonesian recent generation are related to the country’s environmental power to enforce the behavior through modelling obedience and social justifications. To reconstruct the mentality of the people may have to take years and decades. Educators primarily must initiate to take action on improving the behavior of the people in the society in order to avoid more Lucifer Effects in the future.

Minoru Karasawa (left) received his Master’s degree from Kyoto University and Ph.D. from the University of California, Los Angeles, both majoring in psychology. After teaching at Aichi Gakuin University and Kobe University, he has been at Nagoya University since 2006. Dr. Karasawa’s primary research area has been social cognition, covering various issues such as social categorization, intergroup cognition and emotions, and the role of culture and language in social inferences. He is also heading a research project on the psychological mechanism underlying judgments of responsibility and punitive motives in legal contexts. He has been an Associate Editor of the Asian Journal of Social Psychology and the Editor of the Japanese Journal of Social Psychology. Academic associations that he has served as a board member include the Japanese Society of Social Psychology, the Japanese Group Dynamics Association, and the Japanese Society for Law and Psychology. He has been a member of the Science Council of Japan since 2006.

He has taught EFL at junior high school, language schools, and universities in Sydney, and for the past two decades has been living and teaching at the tertiary level in Japan. The International Academic Forum provides new perspectives to the thought-leaders and decision-makers of today and tomorrow by offering constructive environments for dialogue and interchange at the intersections of nation, culture, and discipline. Headquartered in Nagoya, Japan, and registered as a Non-Profit Organization (一般社団法人), IAFOR is an independent think tank committed to the deeper understanding of contemporary geo-political transformation, particularly in the Asia Pacific Region.

The vision of IAFOR grew out of the perceived need to fill a vacuum in the communication and exchange activities of the academic world. Its mission arose out of examining that space and investigating why it existed. The vacuum existed because of the lack of opportunity for serious and thoughtful exchange between academics, members of the global business community, and practitioners in the fields of human endeavor that linked these groups together. In the field of education, for example, we have academic theorists, educational managers (political decision-makers and organizational directors) and classroom teachers with their support staff in IT, library work, exchange programs, and specialist fields. But how often do they have the opportunity to interact?

Moving beyond one particular field, larger questions arise. What function should universities prioritize in the 21st century? What do businesses see as their contribution to social and global well being? How can people on the ground, trying to implement improvements that will transform human life, best be supported? And perhaps above all, what are the agendas that will drive mechanisms to enable these groups to interact effectively?

One piece of distilled thought that came from early exchanges at one of our conferences was the recognition that some of the rhetoric of concern about the problems of developing nations was perhaps over-focused on the term “poverty” because it can be defined only in a relative way. “Hunger” was put forward as being more immediate and itself a contributory factor to poverty, rather than the other way round. One key to the hunger issue could be the provision of safe drinking water, or water for irrigation in some contexts, while flood management might be necessary elsewhere. These, in and by themselves become valuable only insofar as they help to relieve hunger in specific contexts.

IAFOR is affording opportunities that do not exist elsewhere. The base is Osaka, Japan’s great commercial and manufacturing hub, one symbol of the emerging Pacific economy that is already eclipsing the long dominant Atlantic zone. Our conferences present those taking part with three unique dimensions of experience. First of all, it encourages interdisciplinary activity to be expanded. Depending on the field, this can face varying degrees of difficulty, ranging from discouragement to downright prohibition. Those overly dependent on fixed academic structures often see lateral thinking as a threat. None of these negatives apply in IAFOR. Its purpose is to generate new approaches that cross any disciplinary lines. The principle employed is to let the imagination permit intuitive responses to questions. There are no panels of critics. There are simply people who want to listen and reflect. The model of academic work as potholing is replaced by the metaphor of mountaineering. While respecting the need for solid and well-founded academic work, we feel the need to go beyond it from time to time to discover fresh approaches to old questions.

Secondly, it facilitates the heightening of intercultural awareness. Again, we encourage innovation through cross-cultural perception. Cultural roots influence people in their attitudes more than most would realize or admit. The need to see and internalize insights gained from other viewpoints is met by a process of steady illumination.

Thirdly, it promotes the broadening of international exchange. We may live in a globalized world, but in reality parochialism still holds sway. The collapse of the U.S.S.R and the break-up of Yugoslavia led to the re-establishment of numerous former countries. While this may be desirable for the peoples concerned, it merely adds to the world’s cultural confusion. Exchange leads to explanation and that helps the growth of intercultural awareness.

IAFOR makes all of these developments possible in one gathering. Our conferences are not a substitute for specialist conferences. We intend our events to be an alternative that functions as a balance or even a corrective to the extreme tendencies that can arise from more narrowly defined research parameters. In short, IAFOR is promoting and facilitating a new multifaceted approach to one of the core issues of our time, namely globalization and its many forms of growth and expansion. Awareness of how it cuts across the worlds of business, and academia, along with its impact on societies and institutions is one of the driving forces that has given the organization its momentum, and is making it a pioneer in this global age.

IAFOR Journals

How are journal editors appointed?
Journal Editors are appointed by the International Academic Forum’s leadership, under the guidance of the Chairman of the International Advisory Board. The term of appointment is for one issue, to be renewed by mutual consent.

How do we ensure academic integrity?
Once appointed, the editor is free to appoint his or her own editorial team and advisory members. All papers published in the journal have been subjected to the rigorous and accepted processes of academic peer review. Neither editors nor members of the editorial team are remunerated for their work. Authors will never be asked to “contribute” towards publication costs.

How are papers selected?
Journal Editors may accept papers through an open call, and proposed articles may be sent directly to the respective editors. A small number of papers from the associated IAFOR conference proceedings may also be selected by the journal editor(s) for reworking and revising subject to normal processes of review. It is expected that between 5 and 10 percent of papers included in any given conference proceedings will be developed for inclusion in the associated conference journal.

How are IAFOR Journals related to IAFOR conferences?
IAFOR’s journals reflect the interdisciplinary and international nature of our conferences and are organized thematically. Papers included in the associated conference proceedings may be considered for reworking by the editor(s), and would then be subjected to the same processes of peer review as papers submitted by other means.

IAFOR Keynotes

The IAFOR Keynotes Series is a collection of keynote addresses, or associated papers given at our conferences. Presented as a part of the open research archive, the Keynotes series provides an example of the range and quality of speakers at IAFOR events. These keynotes are lightly reworked, and contain references, but are otherwise true to the original address. Many can also be seen in video format on our YouTube page. Whether you were present at the conference or not, the keynotes are thoughtful addresses by senior academics, the content of which may help your research.

Special Series & Monographs

The International Academic Forum is publishing a number of special monographs in print and online form. One such publication is a selection of haiku from the Annual Vladimir Devidé Haiku Award.

Eye Magazine

Through Eye Magazine, the International Academic Forum’s own in-house e-magazine publication, we hope to enlighten you to various views and opinions of our contributors, many of whom have presented full research papers at our various conferences.

The Winter/Spring 2015 of Eye magazine has several articles that focus on human rights & justice, as well as some other great articles, op-eds and essays.

Eye Magazine is available on the IAFOR website (iafor.org/eye) and through the ISSUU reader on your browser or mobile device.
