Welcome to Kobe

Letter of Welcome

Dear Colleagues,

We are very happy to welcome you to The Asian Conference on Psychology and the Behavioral Sciences, which, in IAFOR tradition, is held alongside The Asian Conference on Ethics, Religion and Philosophy. The rationale behind this dual event remains as strong as ever, as the conferences encourage us to reflect upon how we think, as well as reason, believe, and behave, under the dual theme of 'Justice'.

The conference theme is an important one to all delegates, whether engaged in the study of science, philosophy, ethics or religion, and is no doubt in part the reason that this conference has attracted more than 250 delegates from across the globe. Over these few days we will consider the question and concept of 'Justice' from the perspective of scholars, policy makers, educators, therapists, medical doctors, patients, priests and charity workers, and using the lenses of science, religion and philosophy to search for common ground.

The programme for this conference promises to be an exciting one, with thematic topics that address the central theme of the conference in different but complementary ways, including through papers that draw on empirical research, that develop theoretical and conceptual insights, and that engage with pedagogy, and the experiential. The conference will be enhanced through its wide variety of presenters, who will draw on their diverse experiences and knowledges and on their academic, personal and geographical contexts, in a programme that promises stimulating and challenging discussion.

I would like to thank our university partners from across the world, who help to promote the work of IAFOR, and to announce and welcome our newest partners, the University of Hawaii at Manoa, and Michigan State University, both in the USA.

I would like to thank the Keynote and Featured Speakers, Conference Chairs, as well as the many people who acted as reviewers for the conference, and in advance, I would also like to thank all of you for your active participation.

We have a lot to learn from each other in this international academic forum, and I look forward to meeting you all.

Best regards,

Dr. Joseph Haldane, Ph.D. (London), F.R.S.A., F.R.A.S.
President, IAFOR

Please follow the order in the programme, and if for any reason a presenter fails to show, please keep to the original timeslots as delegates use the programme to plan their attendance.

The Session Chair is asked to assume this timekeeping role, and to this end, a yellow and red timekeeping card is used as a visual cue for presenters, letting them know when they have five minutes remaining, and when they must stop.

Keynote Speaker ACP 2016

Keynote Presentation: Freedom's Edge - Religious Freedom, Sexual Freedom, and the Future of Justice in America

Recent events in the United States have resulted in a national debate pitting religious freedom against the civil rights and civil liberties of the LGBT community. This controversy follows closely on the heels of the United States Supreme Court's decision in Burwell v. Hobby Lobby, which set off a firestorm over the balance between reproductive rights and religious freedom. Both conservatives and progressives have raised the level of hysteria. The media has been happy to oblige. Television and radio news programs, newspapers, magazines and the blogosphere are filled daily with reports of discrimination by one or both sides. We have entered a new battle in the culture wars. Of course, the framing of this controversy ignores one central fact: religious freedom and strong civil rights for all can coexist when properly understood.

The stakes are high. For one side fundamental justice and human rights are involved. For the other fundamental justice and civil liberties are involved. I will assert that this supposed conflict has a resolution, and in fact, in most situations the conflict has been manufactured by partisans on each side of the culture wars. This presentation will provide an accessible and clear roadmap to the issues involved in this debate, and a clear path for balancing religious freedom and sexual freedom. Coexistence is possible, and it is necessary for the survival of America as a nation of freedom for all and can provide an example for other nations facing similar issues.

Featured Panel: Holy Way: Its Causes, Nature and, if possible, its Solutions (with Brian Daizen Victoria and Dexter Da Silva)

Noble Prize-winning physicist, Steven Weinberg, described the universality of sacralized violence as follows: "With or without religion, good people will do good things and bad people will do bad things. But for good people to do bad things – that takes religion." While not everyone will agree with Weinberg's position, it can nevertheless serve as a catalyst to ask, as this panel will, "Why?"

Keynote Presentation: Community Mental Health - Supporting Minority Groups in Japan

Since the mid-1990s, Japan has struggled with some of the highest per capita suicide rates globally, and in 2003 – the worst year – 34,427 people died by suicide.

Crisis hotlines provide a vital resource for people contemplating suicide and other forms of mental distress. Social isolation directly impacts a person's mental and physical wellbeing which is further compounded by language and cultural differences. Both foreign and minority populations within Japan face disadvantages at the community, societal, and services levels. The vulnerabilities of these populations was further highlighted following the effects of the Tohoku earthquake. How does a Lifeline providing services in a minority language – in a country recording some of the highest suicide rates and incidences of earthquakes in the world– provide support, generate funding, and maintain volunteer numbers?

Brian Daizen Victoria is a native of Omaha, Nebraska and a 1961 graduate of Nebraska Wesleyan University in Lincoln, Nebraska. He holds a M.A. in Buddhist Studies from Sōtō Zen sect-affiliated Komazawa University in Tokyo, and a Ph.D. from the Department of Religious Studies at Temple University.

In addition to a second, enlarged edition of Zen At War (Rowman & Littlefield, 2006), Brian's major writings include Zen War Stories (RoutledgeCurzon, 2003); an autobiographical work in Japanese entitled Gaijin de ari, Zen bozu de ari (As a Foreigner, As a Zen Priest), published by San-ichi Shobo in 1971; Zen Master Dōgen, coauthored with Prof. Yokoi Yūhō of Aichi-gakuin University (Weatherhill, 1976); and a translation of The Zen Life by Sato Koji (Weatherhill, 1972). Featured Presentation: The Wartime Tribalization of Universal Religions

This paper explores the nature of the relationship between religion and war beyond the headlines in today's newspapers. That is to say, beyond the presently popular idea, at least in the West, that Islam, or at least "radical Islam" or "Islamic fundamentalism" is the source, even the sole source of religion-related violence in the world. This way of thinking readily leads to the conclusion that if only Muslims would give up, or at least drastically reinterpret, such violence-affirming tenets as jihad, religion-related warfare would come to an end.

The point of departure for this paper is the relevant teaching of German philosopher Karl Jaspers. Jaspers argued that during what he called the Axial Age, i.e., the period between 800 to 200 B.C.E., the spiritual foundations of humanity were laid simultaneously and independently in China, India, Persia, Judea, and Greece. These spiritual foundations saw the birth of multiple "universal religions," each of which believed it possessed universal truths valid for all peoples and all times. The thinking of the Axial Age centered on the meaning and purpose of life, focusing on the identity and "salvation" of the individual rather than on the collective wellbeing of the 'tribe'.

While recognizing the importance of the Axial Age, this paper argues that the earlier "tribal mentality" and "tribal religion" did not wholly disappear but were instead sublimated within universal faiths, at least during times of peace, only to reappear once again during times of conflict between ethnic groups, religions or religious subgroups, especially today's "nations" which are, in fact, "tribalism writ large." What makes sublimated tribal religion so difficult to recognize is that it resides safely within the inner recesses of universal religions, so safely that even when resurrected by followers of universal religions the followers continue to imagine they are embracing the universal values and ethics of their particular universal faith.

In closing, this paper maintains that it is only by recognizing "tribal religion" for what it is, i.e., a faith limited to valorizing the wellbeing of one's own tribe/nation at the expense of the "other," will it become possible to transcend this limited focus and realize the true potential or "universality" of one's faith.

National University of Singapore, Singapore

Tan Tarn How is Senior Research Fellow at the Institute of Policy Studies in the Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy, National University of Singapore. He graduated from Peterhouse, Cambridge in 1982 with Bachelor of Arts Honours, Natural Sciences Tripos. He then obtained a Diploma in Education from the Institute of Education, Singapore, in 1984 and later was also a recipient of a three-month Fulbright Scholarship to Boston University in 1993. In the earlier part of his career Tan worked as a teacher; then journalist for The Straits Times, Singapore's main local newspaper including postings as a foreign correspondent and senior political correspondent based in Beijing and Hong Kong. Later Tan became the Head Scriptwriter for Drama Production at the Singapore Television Corporation and Associate Artistic Director of the drama company TheatreWorks, where led workshops for budding playwrights.

An Arts activist and Playwright, Tan Tarn How has written on the development of the arts in Singapore, in particular; fostering partnerships between the people, private and public sectors; the creative industries in Singapore, China and Korea; cultural policy in Singapore; and arts censorship. His research interests also include arts education and role of education in cultural and human development. He has also carried out research on the management and regulation of media in Singapore; the impact of the Internet and social media on society; the role of new and old media in the 2008 Malaysian election and the 2006 and 2011 Singapore elections; and the way in which the Internet and social media has influenced the development of civil society and democratic development.

Featured Presentation: Educational Rankings - Towards an Index of Flourishing Education

Singapore is a powerhouse in global education rankings, consistently placed among the top in league tables such as Program for International Student Assessment (PISA) and Trends in International Mathematics and Science Study (TIMSS). Its best students also frequently triumph in international competitions such as in maths and the sciences, and in diverse and creative skills ranging from debating, winning cases in moot courts to business plan writing. However, Singapore's stellar performance belies what is at core a problematic conception of education. Critics have pointed out the cost to students and families of an intensely, even gruelling, competitive system. But a greater concern is a narrow view of education as largely and fundamentally economic and instrumental in purpose. Despite assurances to the contrary, society at large (and hence the school system) devalues or has come to devalue other aspects of life (and hence of education) such as arts and culture, history, sports and citizenship in a democracy. While it might be argued that an economistic and instrumental conception of education was necessary during the early stages of Singapore's development, this no longer holds true. Such a conception not only short changes citizens, but (contradictorily from an instrumental point of view) poses a threat to further economic development in this modern world where the ability to make connections and to ask questions rather than to merely seek answers are factors that will drive the economy.

Spotlight Speaker ACP 2016

Spotlight Presentation: Beauty and Justice - The Temptations of an Analogy

Beauty and justice are often analysed in similar terms and each has been invoked in the description, indeed praise of the other: Disinterest, the rightness of a fit or composition, and the irreducibility to laws figure among the areas of overlap. Ascertaining the dis-analogies between these two contested, flexible and historically intertwined concepts is not straightforward, if nevertheless crucial for a non-fallacious handling of the analogy. Pleasure, for example, is an essential marker of the beautiful in many accounts, but were a theory of justice – with an eye to establishing the discreteness of its object – to set out the irrelevance of even Kant's disinterested pleasure, it would struggle to compensate for the loss of pleasure as a motivator for just acts.

Arguably, the difference between justice and beauty must be left to the judgement of the instances in which the two terms are employed. That judgement should have such a role in relation to justice and beauty accords with its longstanding role within them. In European legal theory a prince was long excused from the constraints of the laws on the basis that the resulting freedom of action would allow him to administer justice in circumstances where a mechanical application of the laws would be unjust. The rise of the idea of genius in the eighteenth century could be said not simply to coincide with the curtailment of the royal prerogative (or at least with the theoretical dissatisfaction with it) but furthermore to represent its banishment to aesthetics.

Featured Presentation: Bullying and Autism Spectrum Disorder - Helping the Victims to Cope and Report

In the life of adolescents with Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD), interaction with peers at school is a source of stress and traumatic experience. The cause is bullying, the intentional aggressive behavior in the form of verbal and physical harassment and involve power imbalance. Bullying has negative impact on adolescents with ASD, especially if it happens in a long period of time. Because of difficulty in understanding social situations, they are often confused about how to respond to bullies. A number of studies have shown that bullying related to low self-esteem, anxiety, depression, lower academic achievement, and social isolation. For adolescents with ASD, the impact is even worse and can lead to suicidal thoughts.

Therapy for bullying in adolescents with ASD usually requires a long time. It is not easy for them to share the bullying experience because talking about it may inflict intense negative emotions, such as sadness, confusion, anger, and frustration. They also have difficulty in communicating their thoughts and feelings verbally. To help them to be more open about their experiences, therapist needs to understand the unique world of adolescents with ASD and develop a relationship based on empathy and acceptance. Discussing the special characteristics of ASD is also essential. The therapist can discuss about bullying, negative emotions related to it, and coping skills, after they feel more comfortable in therapy session. In addressing bullying at school, the therapist also needs to communicate with teachers and school administrators to develop anti bullying program.

Spotlight Presentation: Complaints Over Unfairness, Escalating Disgust

Many people complain that they feel unhappy because they have to receive unfair treatment. Children feel unhappy and consider their parents treat them unfairly. Employees feel unhappy and perceive their employers treat them unfair. In reality people may have to receive unfair treatment before finding happiness. Many successful people experience unfair treatment in their early life but at the end they experience happy life. Many of us may still remember the story of puss in boots, where a girl must accept a cat, as a form of an unfair share of the family heritage, while others received various family properties. She finally found happiness for having the cat who turned to be a prince. She accepted well her share and she found happiness by accepting her life experience, even an unfair treatment. In numbers of conditions people may share the same quantity and quality of life, but some individuals experience fairness whereas others consider as unfair.

A share of $5 out of $25 may be perceived as an insult, where as a share of $5 out of $10 may be perceived as fair treatment and rewarding which influences feeling of happiness. The same amount of $5 would create different circuitry in the brain regions. Researches in cognitive neuro-science reported that fair and unfair treatment influences the circuitry of particular brain areas in human beings. For example, perception of unfair treatment such as an insult would activate the insulae area in the brain, the region similar to the area that is influenced by feeling of disgust. Fair treatment would activate the ventral striatum and ventromedial prefrontal cortex, and the circuitry of the area similar to the feeling of being rewarded. Perception influences fairness and happiness although the amount of shares are the same. The way people perceive influences their brain regions circuitry which creates various impact on their behaviors. If people can switch their perception by learning to accept life experiences with more gratitude, they may find more happiness. If they keep complaining about being treated unfair; their brain may activate the feeling of disgust which creates negative attitudes toward life.

Noble Prize-winning physicist, Steven Weinberg, described the universality of sacralized violence as follows: "With or without religion, good people will do good things and bad people will do bad things. But for good people to do bad things – that takes religion." While not everyone will agree with Weinberg's position, it can nevertheless serve as a catalyst to ask, as this panel will, "Why?"

ABOUT IAFOR

The International Academic Forum

Academic Vision and Mission

“To Open Minds, To Educate Intelligence, To Inform Decisions”

The vision of IAFOR grew out of the perceived need to fill a vacuum in the communication and exchange activities of the academic world. Its mission arose out of examining that space and investigating why it existed. The vacuum existed because of the lack of opportunity for serious and thoughtful exchange between academics, members of the global business community, and practitioners in the fields of human endeavor that linked these groups together. In the field of education, for example, we have academic theorists, educational managers (political decision-makers and organisational directors) and classroom teachers with their support staff in IT, library work, exchange programmes, and specialist fields. But how often do they have the opportunity to interact?

Moving beyond one particular field, larger questions arise. What function should universities prioritise in the 21st century? What do businesses see as their contribution to social and global well-being? How can people on the ground, trying to implement improvements that will transform human life, best be supported? And perhaps above all, what are the agendas that will drive mechanisms to enable these groups to interact effectively.

One piece of distilled thought that came from early exchanges at one of our conferences was the recognition that some of the rhetoric of concern about the problems of developing nations was perhaps over-focused on the term “poverty” because it can be defined only in a relative way. “Hunger” was put forward as being more immediate and itself a contributory factor to poverty, rather than the other way round. One key to the hunger issue could be the provision of safe drinking water; or water for irrigation in some contexts, while flood management might be necessary elsewhere. These, in and by themselves become valuable only insofar as they help to relieve hunger in specific contexts.

IAFOR is affording opportunities that do not exist elsewhere. The base is Kansai, Japan’s great commercial and manufacturing hub, one symbol of the emerging Pacific economy that is already eclipsing the long dominant Atlantic zone. Our conferences present those taking part with three unique dimensions of experience. First of all, they encourage interdisciplinary activity to be expanded. Depending on the field, this can face varying degrees of difficulty, ranging from discouragement to downright prohibition. Those overly dependent on fixed academic structures often see lateral thinking as a threat. None of these negatives apply in IAFOR. Its purpose is to generate new approaches that cross any disciplinary lines. The principle employed is to let the imagination permit intuitive responses to questions. There are no panels of critics. There are simply people who want to listen and reflect. The model of academic work as potholing is replaced by the metaphor of mountaineering. While respecting the need for solid and well-founded academic work, we feel the need to go beyond it from time to time to discover fresh approaches to old questions.

Secondly, it facilitates the heightening of intercultural awareness. Again, we encourage innovation through cross-cultural perception. Cultural roots influence people in their attitudes more than most would realise or admit. The need to see and internalise insights gained from other viewpoints is met by a process of steady illumination.

Thirdly, it promotes the broadening of international exchange. We may live in a world, but in reality parochialism still holds sway. The collapse of the U.S.S.R and the break-up of Yugoslavia led to the re-establishment of numerous former countries. While this may be desirable for the peoples concerned, it merely adds to the world’s cultural confusion. Exchange leads to explanation and that helps the growth of intercultural awareness.

IAFOR makes all of these developments possible in one gathering. Our conferences are not a substitute for specialist conferences. We intend our events to be an alternative that functions as a balance or even a corrective to the extreme tendencies that can arise from more narrowly defined research parameters. In short, IAFOR is promoting and facilitating a new multifaceted approach to one of the core issues of our time, namely globalisation and its many forms of growth and expansion. Awareness of how it cuts across the worlds of business, and academia, along with its impact on societies and institutions is one of the driving forces that has given the organisation its momentum, and is making it a pioneer in this global age.

IAFOR Journals

The International Academic Forum's Journals conform to the highest academic standards of international peer review, and are published in accordance with the IAFOR publishing commitment to make all of our published materials available online.

How are Journal Editors appointed?

Journal Editors are appointed by The International Academic Forum's leadership, under the guidance of the Chairman of the International Advisory Board. The term of appointment is for one issue, to be renewed by mutual consent.

How do we ensure academic integrity?

Once appointed, the editor is free to appoint his or her own editorial team and advisory members. All papers published in the journal have been subjected to the rigorous and accepted processes of academic peer review. Neither editors nor members of the editorial team are remunerated for their work. Authors will never be asked to "contribute" towards publication costs.

How are papers selected?

Journal Editors may accept papers through an open call, and proposed articles may be sent directly to the respective editors. A small number of papers from the associated IAFOR Conference Proceedings may also be selected by the journal editor(s) for reworking and revising, subject to normal processes of review. It is expected that between five and ten percent of papers included in any given Conference Proceedings will be developed for inclusion in the associated conference journal.

How are IAFOR Journals related to IAFOR conferences?

IAFOR's journals reflect the interdisciplinary and international nature of our conferences and are organised thematically. Papers included in the associated Conference Proceedings may be considered for reworking by the editor(s), and are then subjected to the same processes of peer review as papers submitted by other means.

IAFOR Keynotes Series

The IAFOR Keynotes Series is a collection of Keynote Presentations, or associated papers given at our conferences. Presented as a part of the open research archive, the Keynotes Series provides an example of the range and quality of speakers at IAFOR events. These keynotes are lightly reworked, and contain references, but are otherwise true to the original address. Many can also be seen in video format on our YouTube page. Whether you were present at the conference or not, the content from senior academics is a valuable source of information for research across a broad range of disciplines.

Special Series & Monographs

The International Academic Forum publishes a number of special monographs both in print and online. One such publication is the IAFOR Haiku Anthology, which features a selection of haiku from the annual IAFOR Vladimir Devidé Haiku Award. The Award is currently open for submissions at www.iaforhaikuaward.org.
