Beautiful and truly unique, the Bandstand is located on Brighton’s vibrant seafront. Designed by Phillip Lockwood, Brighton Borough Surveyor, and completed in 1884. The Bandstand is considered to be one of the finest examples of a Victorian bandstand still surviving in England today. The original design featured a bridge linking the upper promenade with the Bandstand which was removed in the late 1970s. The ground floor was used as public conveniences until 2003 when vandalism forced their closure. It was restored to its original specification and re-opened in summer 2009, having undergone a major restoration project to return the building to its Victorian splendour. The deck of the bandstand is used for regular concerts, whilst the base of the building has been converted into a café with an al fresco area.
Dear Delegates,

Welcome to the city of Brighton & Hove, a vibrant and diverse centre of Arts and Culture.

Ever since the Prince Regent first visited in 1783, Brighton & Hove has been England’s most exciting seaside city, and today it’s as vibrant, eccentric and cosmopolitan as ever. As Mayor it’s my job to try and represent our city to others and its civic life to the people who live here… quite a job, considering the depth and breadth of our offer.

Our city has a bohemian, artistic and eccentric atmosphere that can’t be found anywhere else in the UK. We combine the modern with the traditional and the outlandish with the everyday; tempting and treating visitors and residents alike with a unique cultural experience.

If you’ve never visited I urge you to get out and about and make the most of the rich cultural mix - Regency architecture, pleasure pier, specialist shops, pavement cafes, lively arts and of course the exotic Royal Pavilion. Everything’s in walking distance, so take time to explore and enjoy what the city has to offer.

Our City–by-the-sea has a passion for creativity, a desire to look at things differently, and a friendliness that attracts visitors from all over the world. Whether it’s the sea air that changes your perspective or the lively North Laine that buzzes day and night, I am sure that Brighton & Hove has got that special something that will inspire.

I wish you every success with your conference and hope you have a long and enjoyable stay.

Councillor Lynda Hyde
Mayor of the City of Brighton & Hove
Dear Delegates,

The International Academic Forum (IAFOR) returns to the wonderful seaside city of Brighton and Hove for the third year running, an artistic, cultural and educational hub, known as the home to a diverse and inspiring population, and our conference home in the UK.

This 2015 conference series, organized in four separate events over two weeks, welcomes more than 800 participants representing more than fifty countries in an international, intercultural and interdisciplinary celebration.

Since 2009, IAFOR has promoted and facilitated research synergies and partnerships between individuals and institutions in, and between Asian countries, and between Asian countries and the outside world. This function as a network hub has seen IAFOR grow to develop partnerships with many of the world’s foremost institutions of learning, and this event is is strongly supported by this global partnership, and includes such institutions as Waseda University (Japan), Birkbeck University of London (UK), The National Institute of Education (Singapore), The National University of Tainan (Taiwan), Lincoln University (UK), the Hong Kong Institute of Education (IHKSP), Auburn University (USA), Virginia Tech (USA), Monash University (Australia), Lehigh University (USA), NorthWestern University (USA), Barcelona University (Spain), and most recently Moscow State University (Russia).

IAFOR has built a tradition of hosting truly international, intercultural and interdisciplinary conferences. People working in a great range of cultures, contexts, and academic areas come together to share their perspectives on common human issues. The result is invariably a unique experience of learning and sharing and making new contacts for future collaboration, and I do expect us to continue in this tradition.

This conference, the first in a series of four, will bring together scholars and practitioners covering Education, Technology in the Classroom, and Language Learning, and we hope that you will enjoy the rich and diverse program over the next few days together.

If you enjoy this event, then I would encourage you to explore other IAFOR conferences, including announced events in the UK, Japan, Dubai, and Hawaii in 2015 and early 2016, and with events in Boston, Barcelona and Singapore in the planning stages for later in 2016 and 2017.

I would like to thank the conference chairs and the keynote and featured speakers, as well as each and every delegate, from wherever you have come, and I look forward to meeting you all.

Respectfully,

Dr Joseph Haldane, Ph.D. (London), F.R.S.A., F.R.A.S.
President, IAFOR
Getting to the Conference Venue

By Rail from London

London is the hub of the UK’s rail network and it is easy to travel by train to Brighton and the South Coast from the major London stations. The fastest direct travelling times from London to Brighton are:

- London Victoria – 52 minutes (direct)
- London Bridge – 58 minutes (direct)
- London St Pancras – 1 hour 16 minutes (direct)

Rail services in the UK are operated by a number of private train operators. The key operators to Brighton are Southern and First Capital Connect. Trains arrive into Brighton mainline station on Queens Road. Regular rail connections also serve Hove and take just a few minutes from Brighton.

Central Brighton (including the Thistle Brighton) is easily walkable (about 15 minutes) from Brighton Station, but if you require a bus or taxi - these are both available at the front of the station.

If you are travelling from Europe, the Eurostar train arrives from Europe at St Pancras, London, where there are direct train connections to Brighton.

Travelling to Brighton from the London Airports

London Gatwick Airport

Trains from Gatwick to Brighton take approximately 30 minutes direct and run regularly. The Gatwick South rail station is directly linked to Gatwick’s South Terminal and just a few minutes away from North Terminal via a transit train link. You do not need to reserve tickets in advance.

London Heathrow Airport

By Rail: Take the London Underground to London Victoria and connect with a mainline train to Brighton. Alternatively, take the Heathrow Express to Paddington and then the Underground to Victoria. The Heathrow Express is probably quickest but the Underground is the cheaper option. The Journey takes approximately 2 hours 15 minutes, depending on your chosen route and connection times.

By Coach: National Express is the major coach operator serving Brighton. Most international flights arrive at Terminal 4 and 5. From Terminal 4 & 5 there are coach departures every hour. The journey takes 2 hours to 2 hours 30 minutes depending on the airport terminal you are departing from, and costs around 20 GBP each way. Brighton Coach Station is located next to Brighton Pier and is a 2 minute walk from the Thistle Brighton. Full information is available on the National Express website.

We recommend that you bring two copies of your presentation in the case that one fails, and suggest sending yourself the presentation by email as a third and final precaution.

Session Chairs

Session Chairs are expected to introduce themselves and other speakers (briefly), hand out presentation certificates at the end of the session, ensure that the session begins and ends on time, and that the time is divided fairly between the presentations. Each presenter should have no more than 30 minutes in which to present his or her paper, and respond to any questions.

The session chair is asked to assume this timekeeping role, and to this end, a yellow and red timekeeping card is used as a visual cue for presenters, letting them know when they have 5 minutes remaining, and when they must stop.

Please follow the order in the programme, and if for any reason a presenter fails to show, please keep to the original timeslots as delegates use the programme to plan their attendance.

A Polite Request to All Participants

Participants are requested to arrive in a timely fashion for all addresses, whether to their own, or to those of other presenters. Presenters are reminded that the time slots should be divided fairly and equally between the number of presentations, and that they should not overrun. We recommend that the 30 minutes presentation timeslot be divided as follows: 20 minutes for the paper and 10 minutes for Q and A. Please don’t talk during sessions and please turn off your phone or set it to silent during presentations.

Poster Sessions & Requirements

Sessions are 90 minutes in length and are held on the 2F Librart Terrace.

The poster frames are B1 and so it is recommended that posters be no larger than B1 (707mm x 1000mm/27.8 inches x 39.4 inches). A1 (594mm x 841mm/23.4 inches x 39.4 inches) is also fine. Featured Panel Presentation: Challenging practices - Imagining spaces of empowerment and participation
Panel Chair: Linda Morrice, University of Sussex, UK
Kerry Harman, Birkbeck, University of London, UK
David Wolff, University of Brighton, UK
Tamsin Hinton-Smith, University of Sussex, UK

Globalisation is giving rise to ever more complex social, ethnic and cultural diversity. Such diversity, along with the rapidity of change across different spheres, pose particular challenges for how we think about education, and what we understand its role and purposes to be as we move through the early decades of the twenty first century. Growing inequalities, both globally and locally, invite new responses to the communities we wish to engage with, and intensify the need to address issues of social marginalisation and unequal power relations. In different ways the speakers in this opening panel are concerned with how education can contribute to greater equality, and how we can begin to imagine more democratic and empowering spaces in education. Fergal Finnegan and Kerry Harman focus on the principles and practices underpinning education to explore how education might be reconceptualised to give rise to more democratic and socially just practices and spaces. Drawing on his experience of community-university partnerships David Wolff will consider ‘what works’, and how the creation of partnership spaces can address inequalities. Finally, Tamsin Hinton-Smith takes a marginalised community - Roma students in Higher Education - as her starting point. Through understandings of embodied experience, agency and resilience, opportunities and challenges for participation are explored.
Dr. Fergal Finnegan is from Dublin, Ireland and was educated in Trinity College Dublin and Maynooth University. He is the Director of the Higher Diploma course in Further Education and a Lecturer in the Department of Adult and Community Education at Maynooth University. He worked as a community educator in Dublin’s inner city with a wide range of student groups before he became an lecturer. These experiences as practitioner have strongly informed his academic research on inequality and non-traditional students in higher education. Fergal has conducted extensive mixed methods and biographical research on non-traditional student experience both in Ireland and across Europe and is an editor of a recent book from Routledge entitled Student Voices on inequalities in European Higher Education: Challenges for Policy and Practice in a Time of Change. Other research interests include biographical research, learning theory, the nature of reflexivity and the role of recognition in teaching and learning. Fergal currently teaches the philosophy of education and learning theory on a range postgraduate courses in Maynooth. He also teaches and writes about education in relation to state formation, political economy and social movements.

Keynote Presentation: ‘Come build in the empty house’: Reimagining democracy and education in a time of change

We live in a period of transition and profound crisis marked by widening inequalities and looming ecological threats. It seems particularly acute because over the past four decades here has also been a winnowing of the social imagination. To paraphrase Frederic Jameson for many people it has become easier to imagine mass catastrophe than envisage the possibility of progressive change. This distinct type of cultural exhaustion and sense of paralysis that accompanies it, I think, directly linked to the widespread perception of a democratic ‘deficit’. In Europe and further afield there is crisis in legitimacy in mainstream political institutions because there seems to be so little popular control over resources, wealth and decision making. It is not at all coincidental that we have also seen in recent decades the hollowing out of established educational ideals and significant shifts in the organization and dominant understanding of the purpose of mass education. The first part of the paper will explore these changes, ask why this has occurred and what this might indicate about the relationship between democracy and education and the various way this relationship is envisaged, shaped and acted upon.

In the second part of the paper I will go beyond the terrain of critique and move onto a landscape of possibility. I will outline why I believe we need, as researchers and practitioners, to now take the work of reimagining and conceptualizing the possibilities for education for democracy and democratic education seriously. I will make the case that technological change and new political and cultural formations have opened up the possibility of novel and empowering forms of reflexive action. This has, I think, profound implications for how we think about education. In the light of this I want to ask what can be done, and what is being done, to elaborate new principles and practices of democratic education that can fully respond to the challenges, startling disjunctions and opportunities of our time. The paper will conclude by identifying what I believe are some of the fundamental aspects of democratic education in a time of change.
Dr Tamsin Hinton-Smith is Associate Director of the Centre for Gender Studies and Senior Lecturer in Higher Education at the University of Sussex, UK. Her main research interests are in gender and higher education. Higher education interests inequalities; non-traditional students; widening participation; student experience and the impact of emerging Higher Education policy. She is currently working on a Marie Skłodowska-Curie project on ‘Higher Education Internationalisation and Mobility: Inclusions, Equalities and Innovations’ (HEIM) with colleagues in the Centre for Higher Education and Equity Research (CHEER) at the University of Sussex, and partners from the University of Seville, Umea University Sweden, and Roma Education Fund in Budapest, Hungary. Tamsin is also course leader for the postgraduate certificate in higher education (PGCHE) at the University of Sussex.

Featured Panel Presentation: Exploring opportunities in internationally mobile higher education - Intersections of gender and HE experience for Roma students.

Higher education participation has transformative potential for the empowerment of both individuals and communities, and international mobility is heralded as a key site for engagement with the opportunities of the contemporary HE landscape. Yet while the positive potential of such developments is emphasised (e.g. Council of the European Union 2009), they also create new spaces of marginalisation. Such inequalities and exclusions operate along lines of embodied experience including gender, ethnicity, sexuality, and intersections between these. Focusing on intersections of gender and social marginalisation, this paper explores how opportunities to engage with internationally mobile subject (Lynch 2009), are mediated by lived experience, and how these converge with assumptions around the ideal mobile student. The discussion is presented in the context of early findings from the first wave of fieldwork in a 3 year project exploring opportunities for internationally mobile HE participation by participants from socially marginalised groups, focusing on the experience of Roma students. The discussion addresses the role of relevant policies and practices, identifying areas of challenge to participation, and individual and collective strategies in responses to these, while seeking to problematise HE cultures that inhibit participation by diverse constituents, rather than the individuals or communities engaging with them.
David Wolff is Director of the Community University Partnership Programme, University of Brighton. Prior to this David worked in the community and voluntary sector in the fields of homelessness, advice and information services, project management and in the use of IT. He has occupied roles as a service delivery worker, manager, director and consultant.

Featured Panel Presentation: Utilising community university partnership spaces for addressing inequalities

Creating spaces where researchers, students, community practitioners and members can work together to consider and address issues of mutual concern can deliver much for all parties. What makes these partnerships work well and what kind of future spaces do we need to develop? David Wolff will reflect on 12 years of Community University Partnership Programme (cupp.org.uk) at the University of Brighton, including reference to a study they conducted '10 down, 10 to go!' which looks at the future of community university partnership working.
Dr Kerry Harman is programme director for Higher Education Introduction Studies (HEIS) at Birkbeck, University of London. This is a multidisciplinary programme providing access to higher education for students with non-traditional academic qualifications and experience. The themes of equality, diversity and social justice are explored in the programme. Her research interest is in the interrelationships between workplace practices, knowledges, power and subjectivity. This is connected with an interest in enabling the ongoing learning that takes place in and through everyday workplace practices to be made visible. She is also interested in the contemporary intersections between workplaces and higher education institutions and what counts as learning within these institutional domains.

Featured Panel Presentation: Challenging academic practices - How might we enact equality?

Academics often tend to look at others and provide commentary on how others might change rather than looking in their own backyard. Some might even argue that this is the essence of academic activity i.e. that academics provide expertise in their area of speciality in order to contribute to social progress and development. Drawing on Ranciere's concepts of an equality of intelligence and the pedagogical myth I approach the conference topic from a slightly different angle and ask: what challenges and changes might be required in academic communities in higher education to enable empowerment and social change? What might a decoupling of the often taken for granted relationship between knowledge and emancipation open up in terms of the organisation of Higher education? And how might changing our academic practices contribute to equality and social change?

Keynote Presentation: When will we ever learn? Ten great educators and their legacy

This presentation will survey the work of ten great educators, some of whom have been prestigious and highly influential innovators, such as Rudolf Steiner and Paulo Freire, while others, such as Sylvia Ashton-Warner and David Horsburgh were isolated, passionate experimenters, whose pioneering work is relatively little known.

An attempt shall be made to winnow out the essential beliefs and principles which animated their life work, so as to compare what they were advocating in education then, with what effectively counts as education today. Is there any overlap? Will we ever learn the lessons they were trying to teach? What examples of an enduring commitment to their principles can be cited which inspire some hope for the future of education?

Keynote Presentation: Only connect - seven strategies for ensuring teacher-student communication in the classroom

Does the conventional classroom, with a teacher and students sitting at desks, have any place in modern learning? Has technology rendered the normal learning environment redundant? It would seem not, as teachers and students all over the world are still required to turn up at a particular time and place and engage with each other in some way. However, in classrooms where technology is available, has this engagement changed radically? And what about the students’ own technology? Does this make a difference to the classroom experience, or are there some traditional aspects of teaching/learning that should remain the same?

This talk will show how the vital link between teacher and students can be maintained, in a hi-tech classroom or in a situation where the students themselves have sophisticated personal technology.

Further Background Information

This year, I have attended a number of edutech presentations about how technology is transforming the lives of teachers and students. There is no question that this is true, even taking into account the realities of the digital divide. However, two presenter comments made me pause to think. One was the rather dramatic observation that technology would ‘blow down the walls’ of the old-fashioned classroom. The other was that traditional classrooms with a teacher and students at desks ‘would soon be extinct’.

In my opinion, such observations about education are quite unhelpful.

It occurred to me that most people attending those talks work in a system which requires the teacher and students to turn up at an agreed time and place and hopefully that learning will take place while they are together, not just before the students arrive and after they leave.

I then had a conversation with a 19-year-old student, who told me how things had changed when his school introduced desk-top computers for everyone. He was pleased that the class now had access to so much more information and that more learning was self-generated. However, he also noticed a sudden lack of communication between the class and some (not all) of his teachers.

This led me to think that we need to establish some guidelines that help ensure that the link between the teacher and the class is not lost. After all, the teacher is there for a reason, and her expertise is worth something. This talk will present ideas to revive teacher-student communication in the edutech age.

Emerging Design Thinking for Social Change
Kathryn Campbell, University of Alberta, Canada
Michele Jacobsen, University of Calgary, Canada

About the Presenters: Dr. Katy Campbell, Professor, has served as the Dean of the Faculty of Extension at the University of Alberta since 2009. Before that she was Interim Dean (2007-2009), Associate Dean (2001-2007), and Director of Academic Technologies for Learning, a faculty professional development unit, from 1999-2003. Born and raised in Edmonton, Alberta, she received her PhD (1994) in Instructional Studies from the University of Alberta. She joined the Faculty of Extension in 1996; in 2008 she led the development of a new academic plan emphasizing university-community engagement and the scholarship of engagement. Prior to joining the University of Alberta Dr. Campbell was assistant professor at the State University of New York, Ella Cline Shear School of Education, Geneseo (SUNY-Geneseo, 1993-1995) and a distance education specialist at Keewatin Community College in northern Canada. An instructional designer by education and inclination, she works with narrative and autoethnography within a feminist, poststructural theoretical perspective.

Michele Jacobsen is the Associate Dean, Graduate Programs in Education, Werklund School of Education, University of Calgary. She provides academic leadership for research and professional graduate programs that engage over 1200 students. In her own research, Michele uses design-based research approaches to study technology-enabled learning, peer mentorship and responsive pedagogy in school and post-secondary classrooms. Michele draws upon the learning sciences in studying the design of participatory learning environments that sponsor knowledge building, intellectual engagement and assessment as learning.

Abstract: In this presentation we will explore, through examples and discussion, the impact for social change of emerging notions of design on design practice.

We are convinced that instructional designers not only play important roles in the design and development of instructional products, but also act as change agents in changing the way traditional colleges and universities implement their missions in communities. They can work as co-creators to help clients think more critically about the needs of all learners, issues of access, social and cultural implications of information technologies; alternative learning environments and related policy development. Actively helping to shape agendas for change reflects design as political act.

Many design professions are increasingly critical of normative assumptions and practices that have effectively marginalized communities. Alternative design scholarship and practices increasingly offer designers a lens through which we can “understand how unequal power relations are embodied in, and result from, mainstream design practice and products” (Nieusma, 2004, 13). The workplace, and community space converge they become places of protracted struggle, concerned with relationships, challenged by multiple and sometimes conflicting voices. In the end, knowledge is co-created, negotiated and reciprocal. For example, Universal Design, borrowed originally from architecture, exemplifies design as political social action. Alternative design thinking intersects in sociocultural concerns about human diversity, social inclusion, ethical practice, authority, sustainability and multivocality.

Educating Learners with Down Syndrome Successfully - A Narrative Journey
Susette Brynard, University Free State, South Africa

About the Presenters: Dr. Susette Brynard is currently a lecturer in Education Management at the University Free State, South Africa. Previously she was Head of the Department Natural Sciences, Bloemfontein College of Education. She was born in South Africa and graduated at the University Free State to receive a B. Sc.-degree. While lecturing Biology at an Education College she commenced her studies at the University of the Free State, where she received the B Ed (honors) and M Ed Degrees Cum Laude and then her Ph.D. She received numerous awards during her studies. She has been involved in creating opportunities for Down syndrome children and provided support for parents and families with Down Syndrome children for many years. She is doing ground-breaking work on education opportunities for Down syndrome learners, focusing inter alia on improved educational opportunities through implementing principals of self-advocacy. Her work includes both research about, and advocacy for, such opportunities.

Abstract: The aim of the article is to illustrate the important role that parents can play in the development of the education of learners with Down syndrome (DS). A literature review was done to obtain background information on the concept DS and on the history and possibilities of education for learners with DS, as well as on the role of the parent in the management of the education of learners with DS. A qualitative case study, focusing on the narrative approach was implemented to illustrate the management of the educational opportunities and thus, the self-actualisation of all learners with DS. The educational history of an academically successful girl with DS was followed in order to establish what lay behind her success. From the findings it can be deduced that parents and educators should collaborate to enhance the educational opportunities of learners with DS. The contribution this article makes is to convey to educators and parents the important role they can play in the advancement of the education of learners with DS, as a possible way to give these learners a better chance to live a meaningful life. The assumption is that if learners with DS receive optimal stimulation and encouragement from their parents and teachers in collaboration with one another, from an early age, their educational skills and self-actualisation will benefit to a large extent. This will improve their opportunities to become valued human beings.

Being the Master of Your Destiny
Sheri Brynard, Lettie Fouche School, South Africa

About the Presenter: Sheri Brynard (32 years old) of South Africa is the only person with Down syndrome who is a qualified teacher, in the world. She is also an international ambassador for all people with Down syndrome. She truly believes that all people have the ability to choose to make the best of their circumstances and she is the living example of that. She is currently an assistant teacher in a Pre-primary school and she gives motivational speeches all over the world. In March last year she addressed an International Conference on International Down syndrome day held in the headquarters of the United Nations in New York. She also did the opening speech at the last International Down syndrome Conference and spoke at the University of Canterbury in the UK in July last year. This year she has addressed the community in Guildford in the UK as well as Lord Wandsworth College in Hampshire in the UK in January. In June this year Sheri was also invited to the Childs World Conference in Wales (UK) and she gave the main Conference Banquet keynote presentation on Thursday 26th June 2014 (at which all the delegates of nearly 170 countries, senior university staff and external guests was present).

Abstract: With this presentation, an Afrikaans speaking woman of 32 will inform the audience in English how she grew up as a girl with Down syndrome in South Africa. She will explain how her determination to make the best of her situation helped her to cope with her disability and how she, with the help of her parents, handled the preconceived ideas of the people of her time.

She will illustrate how a positive outlook on life helped her to achieve. She made the words and the philosophy of Nelson Mandela “you are the master of your destiny and you are the captain of your soul”, her own life philosophy. She truly believes that one must focus on what you have and be proud of who you are. One should never hide behind circumstances and one must work hard to make the best of who you are. You only excel when you don’t use the excuses you have. She questions the fact that so many like her are being aborted and she gives a voice to the voiceless in this regard.

Sheri Brynard gives meaning to her life by trying to change people’s perceptions about people with Down syndrome in South Africa and abroad. She also tries to help the so called normal people who listen to her to focus on the positive things in their own lives.

Sheri is proud to be who she is, a girl with Down syndrome.
“To Open Minds, To Educate Intelligence, To Inform Decisions”

The International Academic Forum provides new perspectives to the thought-leaders and decision-makers of today and tomorrow by offering constructive environments for dialogue and interchange at the intersections of nation, culture, and discipline. Headquartered in Nagoya, Japan, and registered as a Non-Profit Organization (一般社団法人), IAFOR is an independent think tank committed to the deeper understanding of contemporary geo-political transformation, particularly in the Asia Pacific Region.

For more information about the International Academic Forum and its activities, please visit our website at www.iafor.org

The vision of IAFOR grew out of the perceived need to fill a vacuum in the communication and exchange activities of the academic world. Its mission arose out of examining that space and investigating why it existed. The vacuum existed because of the lack of opportunity for serious and thoughtful exchange between academics, members of the global business community, and practitioners in the fields of human endeavor that linked these groups together. In the field of education, for example, we have academic theorists, educational managers (political decision-makers and organizational directors) and classroom teachers with their support staff in IT, library work, exchange programs, and specialist fields. But how often do they have the opportunity to interact?

Moving beyond one particular field, larger questions arise. What function should universities prioritize in the 21st century? What do businesses see as their contribution to social and global well being? How can people on the ground, trying to implement improvements that will transform human life, best be supported? And perhaps above all, what are the agendas that will drive mechanisms to enable these groups to interact effectively.

One piece of distilled thought that came from early exchanges at one of our conferences was the recognition that some of the rhetoric of concern about the problems of developing nations was perhaps over-focused on the term “poverty” because it can be defined only in a relative way. “Hunger” was put forward as being more immediate and itself a contributory factor to poverty, rather than the other way round. One key to the hunger issue could be the provision of safe drinking water, or water for irrigation in some contexts, while flood management might be necessary elsewhere. These, in and by themselves become valuable only insofar as they help to relieve hunger in specific contexts.

IAFOR is affording opportunities that do not exist elsewhere. The base is Kansai, Japan’s great commercial and manufacturing hub, one symbol of the emerging Pacific economy that is already eclipsing the long dominant Atlantic zone. Our conferences present those taking part with three unique dimensions of experience. First of all, it encourages interdisciplinary activity to be expanded. Depending on the field, this can face varying degrees of difficulty, ranging from discouragement to downright prohibition. Those overly dependent on fixed academic structures often see lateral thinking as a threat. None of these negatives apply in IAFOR. Its purpose is to generate new approaches that cross any disciplinary lines. The principle employed is to let the imagination permit intuitive responses to questions. There are no panels of critics. There are simply people who want to listen and reflect. The model of academic work as potholing is replaced by the metaphor of mountaineering. While respecting the need for solid and well-founded academic work, we feel the need to go beyond it from time to time to discover fresh approaches to old questions.

Secondly, it facilitates the heightening of intercultural awareness. Again, we encourage innovation through cross-cultural perception. Cultural roots influence people in their attitudes more than most would realize or admit. The need to see and internalize insights gained from other viewpoints is met by a process of steady illumination.

Thirdly, it promotes the broadening of international exchange. We may live in a globalized world, but in reality parochialism still holds sway. The collapse of the U.S.S.R and the break-up of Yugoslavia led to the re-establishment of numerous former countries. While this may be desirable for the peoples concerned, it merely adds to the world’s cultural confusion. Exchange leads to explanation and that helps the growth of intercultural awareness.

IAFOR makes all of these developments possible in one gathering. Our conferences are not a substitute for specialist conferences. We intend our events to be an alternative that functions as a balance or even a corrective to the extreme tendencies that can arise from more narrowly defined research parameters. In short, IAFOR is promoting and facilitating a new multifaceted approach to one of the core issues of our time, namely globalization and its many forms of growth and expansion. Awareness of how it cuts across the worlds of business, and academia, along with its impact on societies and institutions is one of the driving forces that has given the organization its momentum, and is making it a pioneer in this global age.
Stuart D. B. Picken is the Chairman of the International Advisory Board, and in this role is Chairman of the Organization. As Chairman of IAFOR, Professor Picken helps guide the academic and political strategy of the organization, and assists in the forging of global institutional partnerships. He is also responsible for the development of the IAFOR Research Institutes.

The author of a dozen books and over 130 articles and papers, Professor Picken is considered one of the foremost scholars on Japan, China, and Globalization in East Asia. As an academic, Professor Picken has devoted more than 30 years to scholarship in Japan, notably as a Professor of Philosophy at the International Christian University in Tokyo, where he specialized in ethics and Japanese thought, and as International Adviser to the High Priest of Tsubaki Grand Shrine (Mie prefecture). He has also served as a consultant to various businesses, including Jun Ashida Ltd., Mitsui Mining & Smelting Corp, Kobe Steel, and Japan Air Lines.

In November 2008, the Government of Japan awarded Professor Picken the Order of the Sacred Treasure for his pioneering research, and outstanding contribution to the promotion of friendship and mutual understanding between Japan and the UK. The honour is normally reserved for Japanese citizens and is a mark of the utmost respect in which Professor Picken is held by the Japanese Government. More recently, in 2012 he was invited to London to attend a reception at the Japanese Embassy, hosted by Emperor Akihito and Empress Michiko as an expression of their gratitude towards Britons who had helped support Japan after the 2011 Tohoku earthquake and tsunami. Professor Picken helped organize fundraising efforts through both the Japan Society of Scotland, of which he is the Chair, in the UK, and IAFOR in Japan.

Although now resident in Scotland, Professor Picken maintains his interests in Japan, as Chair of the Japan Society of Scotland, and through the IAFOR IAB. He is also the Chairman of the Academic Board of New College, Birmingham. He lives near Glasgow with his wife and two children.

Joseph Haldane is the President of the International Academic Forum. He was Academic Director from IAFOR’s inception in 2009 until January 2011, and Executive Director from 2011 until late 2014, when he assumed his current role. He is responsible for devising strategy, setting policies, forging institutional partnerships, implementing projects, and overseeing the organization’s business and academic operations, including research, publications and events.

Dr Haldane’s academic interests include politics and international affairs, literature and history, and he holds a PhD from the University of London in 19th century French Studies. He began his academic career in France, and from 2002-2005 held full-time faculty positions at the University of Paris XII (Paris-Est Créteil) and Sciences Po Paris, as well as visiting positions at both the French Press Institute in the University of Paris II (Université Panthéon-Assas), and the School of Journalism at Sciences Po Paris. Prior to founding IAFOR in 2009, Dr Haldane was an Associate Professor at Nagoya University of Commerce and Business in Japan, where he taught a range of language and culture courses at undergraduate level, and the MBA Ethics course in the graduate school.

Dr Haldane’s current research concentrates on post-war Japanese and Chinese history, as well as Sino-Japanese and US-Japan relations in the same period. In 2012 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Asiatic Society, and in 2015 a Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts.
The IAB Executive Council is composed of distinguished academics, business executives, former and current government officials, and community leaders of international standing. Its role is to provide counsel and direction in the business and affairs of IAFOR, suggest and approve the areas of scholarly investigation, and safeguard the independence of the Forum’s work. International Directors of Program and Research Institute Directors are ex-officio members of the Executive Council of the International Advisory Board. Membership of the Executive Council of the International Advisory Board is by invitation only.

Journals FAQ

How are journal editors appointed?
Journal Editors are appointed by the International Academic Forum’s leadership, under the guidance of the Chairman of the International Advisory Board. The term of appointment is for one issue, to be renewed by mutual consent.

How do we ensure academic integrity?
Once appointed, the editor is free to appoint his or her own editorial team and advisory members. All papers published in the journal have been subjected to the rigorous and accepted processes of academic peer review. Neither editors nor members of the editorial team are remunerated for their work. Authors will never be asked to “contribute” towards publication costs.

How are papers selected?
Journal Editors may accept papers through an open call, and proposed articles may be sent directly to the respective editors. A small number of papers from the associated IAFOR conference proceedings may also be selected by the journal editor(s) for reworking and revising subject to normal processes of review. It is expected that between 5 and 10 percent of papers included in any given conference proceedings will be developed for inclusion in the associated conference journal.

How are IAFOR journals related to IAFOR conferences?
IAFOR’s journals reflect the interdisciplinary and international nature of our conferences and are organized thematically. Papers included in the associated conference proceedings may be considered for reworking by the editor(s), and would then be subjected to the same processes of peer review as papers submitted by other means.

Visit the IAFOR website for further information - www.iafor.org/journals
IAFOR Keynotes

The IAFOR Keynotes Series is a collection of keynote addresses, or associated papers given at our conferences. Presented as a part of the open research archive, the Keynotes series provides an example of the range and quality of speakers at IAFOR events. These keynotes are lightly reworked, and contain references, but are otherwise true to the original address. Many can also be seen in video format on our YouTube page. Whether you were present at the conference or not, the keynotes are thoughtful addresses by senior academics, the content of which may help your research.

Special Series & Monographs

The International Academic Forum is publishing a number of special monographs in print and online form. One such publication is a selection of haiku from the Annual Vladimir Devidé Haiku Award.

Eye Magazine

Through Eye Magazine, the International Academic Forum’s own in-house e-magazine publication, we hope to enlighten you to various views and opinions of our contributors, many of whom have presented full research papers at our various conferences.

The Summer 2015 edition of Eye magazine is available on the IAFOR website (iafor.org/eye) and through the ISSUU reader on your browser or mobile device.
