Welcome to Brighton

"[IAFOR] conferences present those taking part with three unique dimensions of experience, encouraging interdisciplinary discussion, facilitating heightened intercultural awareness, and promoting international exchange."

Professor Sue Jackson
Pro-Vice Master for Teaching & Learning, Birkbeck, University of London
IAFOR Executive Council Member

Dear Delegates,

Welcome to the wonderful seaside city of Brighton & Hove. In many ways the diverse backgrounds of the scholars gathered for this event in terms of nation, culture and discipline is mirrored by the diversity of Brighton & Hove, long a center of culture, counter culture, and education.

Over this long weekend together, we are happy to welcome academics from over forty countries to consider variations on the theme of justice from a number of research backgrounds.

Justice, as an idea, a topic, an heuristic, or a concept, is something to which most of us return in some way or another, and helps condition our work, academic work and how we engage with ourselves and those around us.

In uncertain global political and economic times, and with the UK and Europe in a period of great change, constitutional crisis and turmoil, questions of justice run central to, and condition, debates from the micro to the macro.

The academic program over the next few days promises to be both challenging and inspiring, and I would encourage your very active participation throughout the event. We have a great deal to learn from each other in this International Academic Forum.

I look forward to meeting you all.

Warm Regards,

About the Film

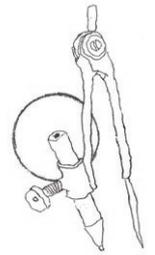

In Ordos, China, thousands of farmers are being relocated into a new city under a government plan to modernize the region. The Land of Many Palaces follows a government official whose job is to convince these farmers that their lives will be better off in the city, and a farmer in one of the last remaining villages in the region who is pressured to move. The film explores a process that will take shape on an enormous scale across China, since the central government announced plans to relocate 250 million farmers to cities across the nation over the next 20

Justice & Sustainability

Conference Themes

Justice is this year's conference theme for the 2016 IAFOR Social Sciences conferences. Justice can be used as a working tool within a framework for social science research. It can be the basis of an investigation into and the complex interplay of systems of law, education, business and public policy that comprise the context of social life.

This theme invites us looks at concepts and forms Justice can take, and the contested spaces around these terms, particularly the issues of sustainability, the environment, domestic and international law, equity, along with access to water, food, healthcare and education.

This international and interdisciplinary conference calls for social scientists around the globe to come together to share their respective outlooks and collective wisdoms in the pursuit of a sustainable world. The speakers will be expressing divergent views, searching for common ground, and looking for the synergies that can inspire multidisciplinary research collaborations, as we work together to address complex problems, establish common visions, and motivate communities and societies to embody the ideal of justice in their activities.

The conferences are an ambitious expression of the steadily emerging global network of IAFOR activities. Justice is this year's conference theme for the 2016 IAFOR Social Sciences conferences, in an ambitious conference program that will be held in four venues (Japan, Dubai, UK, USA) and across three continents, with a combined attendance of more than a thousand delegates from over 50 countries, and dozens more cultures.

We hope and expect the 2016 conference themes to inspire a number of research avenues, and look forward to discussing ideas, findings and synergies, in this international academic forum.

Capital, Conflict & Cooperation

The past year has seen enormous fluctuations in global economic markets, as individual governments' fiscal and monetary policies have tried to deal with unstable political environments, wars, asset bubbles, and mass migrations.

Competing political and economic visions throughout the world vie for prominence, and present very different and frequently opposing responses: from austerity and budget cuts, to industry bailouts, central investments in infrastructure, and governmental protectionism. Calls for increased economic deregulation on the one side are tempered by ever increasing national and supranational government involvement, whether through such organisations as the European Union or trade agreements such as the TPP.

Increasing wealth gaps between countries, and between citizens and classes within countries, has fuelled anger and resentment, and created increased strains of nationalism and authoritarianism and extreme political movements.

This conference asked for abstract submissions under the theme of "Capital, Conflict and Cooperation", and expects that this theme will be broadly interpreted to look at how the capital necessary for business and economic prosperity can cause conflict on myriad levels, political and social, within and between countries, and then reflect on the space and need for cooperation in pursuit of sustainable solutions.

Mayor's Welcome

Dear Delegates,

Welcome to the city of Brighton & Hove, a vibrant and diverse centre of Arts and Culture.

Ever since the Prince Regent first visited in 1783, Brighton & Hove has been England's most exciting seaside city, and today it's as vibrant, eccentric and cosmopolitan as ever. As Mayor it's my job to represent our city to others and its civic life to the people who live here... quite a job, considering the depth and breadth of our offerings.

Our city has a bohemian and artistic atmosphere that can't be found anywhere else in the UK. We combine the modern with the traditional and the outlandish with the everyday; tempting and treating visitors and residents alike with a unique cultural experience.

If you've never visited I urge you to get out and about and make the most of the rich cultural mix – Regency architecture, pleasure pier, specialist shops, pavement cafés, lively arts and of course the exotic Royal Pavilion. Everything's in walking distance, so take time to explore and enjoy what the city has to offer.

Our City-by-the-sea has a passion for creativity, a desire to look at things differently, and a friendliness that attracts visitors from all over the world.

Whether it's the sea air that changes your perspective or the lively North Laine that buzzes day and night, I am sure that Brighton & Hove has got that special something that will inspire.

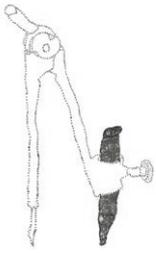

I wish you every success with your conference and hope you have a long and enjoyable stay.

The major missions of JETRO London are to promote foreign direct investment in Japan, to promote export from Japan and to support EU-Japan EPA negotiation. Since joining the Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) in 1985, Mr Sakaguchi has gained a range of expertise across both finance and trade. This includes positions at the Nippon Export and Investment Insurance (NEXI) as the Chief Representative of the NEXI Paris Office (2002-2005), and as the Chief Executive Director of the NEXI General Affairs Department (2011-2014), as well as a period serving as the Director for Planning Division, Planning and Coordination Bureau, Financial Services Agency (FSA) of Japan (2006-2008).

He graduated from the University of Tokyo's Faculty of Law in 1985.

Keynote Presentation: Japanese Economy and Business Opportunities

Japan has changed impressively since the 2013 Abenomics or Three Allows Policy, which have bold monetary policy, flexible fiscal policy and growth strategy boosting private investment. Abenomics has put the Japanese economy on the path to exit from its deflation of two decades and make a steady recovery. The Japanese economy, however, is now affected by the weak global markets such as emerging economies and increasing political and regional instability including terrorism and migration or refugee crisis. Japan hosted Ise-Shima G7 Summit on 26 and 27 May, 2016 to address major economic and political challenges. G7 leaders shared the idea of Abenomics and issued a message for stronger long-term global growth as G7 Ise-Shima Economic initiative.

Initially I'm going to be analysing the present economy of Japan and forecast its development. After that I want to inspire the attendants, I hope, by showing future opportunities in Japanese markets, for example, Japan's re-emergence by structural reforms initiated by the government, sophisticated Japanese markets with an intellectual accumulation that generates innovation, and business friendly and cost effective environment with well-developed social infrastructure. Japan will host the Rugby World Cup games in 2019 and 2020, the Tokyo Olympic and Paralympic games, which will accelerate growth of the Japanese economy and provide wide ranges of business opportunities for foreign companies as well. And finally I'd like to provide some stimulating ideas and information on starting successful business in Japan.

Keynote Presentation: What Justice Demands - the interdisciplinary futures of legal research

Lawyers, legal theorists and social scientists typically ask different sets of questions that are, oftentimes, fundamentally misaligned. Questions that seek to critically examine power relations and normative social values are usually not questions of mere legality, economic efficiency or political expediency. For interdisciplinary scholars, this tension riddles each stage of engagement, from fieldwork and case analysis to writing and pedagogical practice. It informs one's theoretical perspectives and ultimately ensures that such scholars sit uncomfortably within a hybrid political and ethical economy. While this may at first glance seem to be the undoing of interdisciplinary research, perhaps it is merely a challenge. In fact, this discomfort may be what makes interdisciplinary research the future of legal research.

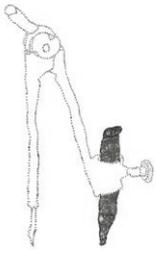

In this paper, Bruce-Jones explores the tensions and possibilities inherent in interdisciplinary work at the junction of the legal, the social-scientific and the literary. The paper draws upon examples from his research on race, sexuality, migration and state violence in the United Kingdom, Germany, the United States, Jamaica and Northern India. Ultimately, the paper argues that the nexus between interdisciplinary scholarship and disciplinary discomfort must be critically understood if we are to position ourselves, as researchers, on questions of justice.

Keynote Presentation: Who Makes the Rules of Global Politics - And Who Observes Them?

There is an increasingly vigorous debate taking place over whether there really is a meaningful 'international community' any more. Conflict lies on the fault lines of any international system and in conflicts since the end of the Cold War there has been precious little evidence of the potency of the international community, despite constant references to its importance and continued appeals to its actions and values.

This presentation discusses the way in which the essential rules of international politics were formed and those states and societies that shaped them. It goes on to describe the contemporary challenges to those rules; challenges to liberal democracy, free trade, global economic management and to military/political legitimacy.

The presentation concentrates on the most critical fault lines in the present international system that will determine whether the existing rules will endure or will be changing irrevocably and the implications of this for future international conflict and war.

Featured Presentation: Devolution and Policy Change - The Two Cases of Smoking Ban in the UK and Japan

The aim of my presentation is to investigate the factors promoting policy change by sub-national government from a comparative perspective, focusing on the policy making process of smoking ban in public places in the UK and Japan. In the UK, transfer of legislative powers from Westminster to Scotland, Wales and the Northern Ireland has been carried out since the late of 1990s. In Japan, although UK-styled devolution did not happen, local governments possess a large extent of secondary legislative powers and local taxation powers. In 2005, the Scottish Parliament passed the bill of ban on smoking in public places prior to the Westminster parliament. In Japan, the national government is reluctant to introduce to that bill. In contrast, two prefectural governments introduced the by-law (regulation) of ban on smoking in public places.

Two cases suggest that while institutional reforms, which facilitate sub-national governments to introduce progressive legislations, arrange preconditions for policy innovation, policy capacity for agenda-setting is essential element. Policy change could occur regardless of political/administrative systems. At the same time, the extent of policy cost which might be incurred by the sub-national government made different consequences between two countries. In the UK, the Scottish Executive and Parliament successfully introduced the bill, sifting venue of agenda-setting and reframing the problem as public health. In Japan, while governors of local governments could set agenda of banning smoking in public places, they had to spend large amount of their policy resources to form consensus among the assembly and interest groups in order to pass the bill.

Professor Picken is the Chairman of the IAFOR International Advisory Board. The author of a dozen books and over 130 articles and papers, he is considered one of the foremost scholars on Japan, China, and Globalization in East Asia. As an academic, Professor Picken has devoted more than 30 years to scholarship in Japan, notably as a Professor of Philosophy at the International Christian University in Tokyo, where he specialized in ethics and Japanese thought, and as International Adviser to the High Priest of Tsubaki Grand Shrine (Mie prefecture). He has also served as a consultant to various businesses, including Jun Ashida Ltd., Mitsui Mining & Smelting Corp., Kobe Steel, and Japan Air Lines. In 2008, the Government of Japan awarded Professor Picken the Order of the Sacred Treasure for his pioneering research, and outstanding contribution to the promotion of friendship and mutual understanding between Japan and the UK. The honour is normally reserved for Japanese citizens and is a mark of the utmost respect in which Professor Picken is held by the Japanese Government. More recently, in 2012 he was invited to London to attend a reception at the Japanese Embassy, hosted by Emperor Akihito and Empress Michiko as an expression of their gratitude towards Britons who had helped support Japan after the 2011 Tohoku earthquake and tsunami. Professor Picken helped organize fundraising efforts through both the Japan Society of Scotland, of which he is the chair, in the UK, and IAFOR in Japan. Although now resident in Scotland, Professor Picken maintains his interests in Japan, as Chair of the Japan Society of Scotland, and through the IAFOR IAB. He is also the Chairman of the Academic Board of New College, Birmingham.

Academic Vision and Mission

“To Open Minds, To Educate Intelligence, To Inform Decisions”

The vision of IAFOR grew out of the perceived need to fill a vacuum in the communication and exchange activities of the academic world. Its mission arose out of examining that space and investigating why it existed. The vacuum existed because of the lack of opportunity for serious and thoughtful exchange between academics, members of the global business community, and practitioners in the fields of human endeavor that linked these groups together. In the field of education, for example, we have academic theorists, educational managers (political decision-makers and organisational directors) and classroom teachers with their support staff in IT, library work, exchange programmes, and specialist fields. But how often do they have the opportunity to interact?

Moving beyond one particular field, larger questions arise. What function should universities prioritise in the 21st century? What do businesses see as their contribution to social and global well-being? How can people on the ground, trying to implement improvements that will transform human life, best be supported? And perhaps above all, what are the agendas that will drive mechanisms to enable these groups to interact effectively.

One piece of distilled thought that came from early exchanges at one of our conferences was the recognition that some of the rhetoric of concern about the problems of developing nations was perhaps over-focused on the term “poverty” because it can be defined only in a relative way. “Hunger” was put forward as being more immediate and itself a contributory factor to poverty, rather than the other way round. One key to the hunger issue could be the provision of safe drinking water, or water for irrigation in some contexts, while flood management might be necessary elsewhere. These, in and by themselves become valuable only insofar as they help to relieve hunger in specific contexts.

IAFOR is affording opportunities that do not exist elsewhere. The base is Kansai, Japan’s great commercial and manufacturing hub, one symbol of the emerging Pacific economy that is already eclipsing the long dominant Atlantic zone. Our conferences present those taking part with three unique dimensions of experience. First of all, they encourage interdisciplinary activity to be expanded. Depending on the field, this can face varying degrees of difficulty, ranging from discouragement to downright prohibition. Those overly dependent on fixed academic structures often see lateral thinking as a threat. None of these negatives apply in IAFOR. Its purpose is to generate new approaches that cross any disciplinary lines. The principle employed is to let the imagination permit intuitive responses to questions. There are no panels of critics. There are simply people who want to listen and reflect. The model of academic work as potholing is replaced by the metaphor of mountaineering. While respecting the need for solid and well-founded academic work, we feel the need to go beyond it from time to time to discover fresh approaches to old questions.

Secondly, it facilitates the heightening of intercultural awareness. Again, we encourage innovation through cross-cultural perception. Cultural roots influence people in their attitudes more than most would realise or admit. The need to see and internalise insights gained from other viewpoints is met by a process of steady illumination.

Thirdly, it promotes the broadening of international exchange. We may live in a world, but in reality parochialism still holds sway. The collapse of the U.S.S.R and the break-up of Yugoslavia led to the re-establishment of numerous former countries. While this may be desirable for the peoples concerned, it merely adds to the world’s cultural confusion. Exchange leads to explanation and that helps the growth of intercultural awareness.

IAFOR makes all of these developments possible in one gathering. Our conferences are not a substitute for specialist conferences. We intend our events to be an alternative that functions as a balance or even a corrective to the extreme tendencies that can arise from more narrowly defined research parameters. In short, IAFOR is promoting and facilitating a new multifaceted approach to one of the core issues of our time, namely globalisation and its many forms of growth and expansion. Awareness of how it cuts across the worlds of business, and academia, along with its impact on societies and institutions is one of the driving forces that has given the organisation its momentum, and is making it a pioneer in this global age.

IAFOR Journals

The International Academic Forum's Journals conform to the highest academic standards of international peer review, and are published in accordance with the IAFOR publishing commitment to make all of our published materials available online.

How are Journal Editors appointed?

Journal Editors are appointed by The International Academic Forum's leadership, under the guidance of the Chairman of the International Advisory Board. The term of appointment is for one issue, to be renewed by mutual consent.

How do we ensure academic integrity?

Once appointed, the editor is free to appoint his or her own editorial team and advisory members. All papers published in the journal have been subjected to the rigorous and accepted processes of academic peer review. Neither editors nor members of the editorial team are remunerated for their work. Authors will never be asked to "contribute" towards publication costs.

How are papers selected?

Journal Editors may accept papers through an open call, and proposed articles may be sent directly to the respective editors. A small number of papers from the associated IAFOR Conference Proceedings may also be selected by the journal editor(s) for reworking and revising, subject to normal processes of review. It is expected that between five and ten percent of papers included in any given Conference Proceedings will be developed for inclusion in the associated conference journal.

How are IAFOR Journals related to IAFOR conferences?

IAFOR's journals reflect the interdisciplinary and international nature of our conferences and are organised thematically. Papers included in the associated Conference Proceedings may be considered for reworking by the editor(s), and are then subjected to the same processes of peer review as papers submitted by other means.

IAFOR Keynotes Series

The IAFOR Keynotes Series is a collection of Keynote Presentations, or associated papers given at our conferences. Presented as a part of the open research archive, the Keynotes Series provides an example of the range and quality of speakers at IAFOR events. These keynotes are lightly reworked, and contain references, but are otherwise true to the original address. Many can also be seen in video format on our YouTube page. Whether you were present at the conference or not, the content from senior academics is a valuable source of information for research across a broad range of disciplines.

Special Series & Monographs

The International Academic Forum publishes a number of special monographs both in print and online. One such publication is the IAFOR Haiku Anthology, which features a selection of haiku from the annual IAFOR Vladimir Devidé Haiku Award. This year's award was its most prolific yet, attracting nearly 700 submissions from 60 countries. iaforhaikuaward.org
